FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Armed Forces Staff College BY LT. GEN. A. D. BRUCE, USA Commandant

UNDER stress of global war the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in 1943, established an Army-Navy Staff College to train selected officers for duty in joint commands. This College fulfilled its wartime mission so well that it was determined a similar institution should be established on a permanent basis. On 13 Aug. 1946, the Joint Chiefs of Staff established the Armed Forces Staff College and assigned responsibility for its operation and maintenance to the Chief of Naval Operations as

Lt. Gen. Bruce

Executive Agent for that body.

The new College, being joint in nature, required a location close to Army, Air Force and Navy installations, and for reasons of economy, a location requiring minimum expenditures for its establishment. Norfolk, Va., home of our largest naval base, was the logical site.

With the National War College and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, the Armed Forces Staff College completes a well-rounded trio of higher educational institutions under the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Of the three, however, it is the one that deals primarily and foremost with operations, from both the staff and command level, as its Mission is: "To train selected officers of the Armed Forces of the United States in joint operations." To carry out this Mission, the scope of instruction includes:

"a. Characteristics, organization, and employment of army, naval and air forces and the relation of these forces to each other.

"b. Joint staff techniques and procedures.

"c. Trends of new weapons and scientific developments and their effect upon joint operations.

"d. The organization, composition, and functions of theaters of operations and major joint task forces, and the responsibilities (strategic, tactical, and logistical) of the commanders thereof.

"e. The preparation of plans for amphibious and airborne operations involving the employment of joint forces."

Both the Mission and the scope of instruction have been prescribed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Since 1946, in carrying out the prescribed rotation of Commandants, the first cycle has been completed, as Lt. Gen.

President Directs Pentagon To Study Retaining of Career Service Personnel

President Eisenhower demonstrated this week that as Chief Executive he is just as interested in the morale and welfare of military personnel and their attraction to and retention in Service as he was as a commander in the field, as Army Chief of Staff, or as Chairman of the JCS.

The President directed Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson "to organize a study of the problems of attracting and holding competent career personnel—civilian and military—in the Department of Defense."

Said President Eisenhower in his Defense Department reorganization message:

"We owe it to all the people to maintain the best military establishment that we know how to devise. There are none, however, to whom we owe it more than the soldiers, the sailors, the marines, and the airmen in uniform whose lives are pledged to the defense of our freedom."

It was not certain whether the President's order to Mr. Wilson was issued before or after creation of a special joint Service committee under Rear Adm. J. P. Womble, jr., USN (THE JOURNAL, 11 April), which has been assembling data on the decreased attractiveness of Service careers.

Secretary Wilson, in any case, can be expected to press for an exhaustive in-

Army Temp. Promotions Exceed 2000 Mark

Army temporary promotions to captain and major from current selections went over the 2000 mark this week, as promotions continue to be made to fill existing vacancies in these ranks.

Reported in this week's issue of THE JOURNAL are two increments of promotions to captain and one to major (see Pages 1052 and 1074). The latest list released in time for publication included the names of 406 first lieutenants promoted to captain in Special Orders No. 82, 29 April, published at the end of this article.

This is the fourth and largest increment of promotions to captain. There have now been 1244 promotions to that rank in the current selections. Cut-off date for the last group is 12 Aug. 1948. The new zone of consideration for promotion to captain begins with 31 Dec. 1948 and extends through 31 Dec. 1949.

This means that those now being promoted were either previously considered or came on active duty after the last selections were made in 1951.

To date, there have been 970 promotions to major, with latest cut-off date of 25 Feb. 1945. This date is still within the prior zone of consideration. The new zone begins with date of rank of 31 Dec. 1946 and extends through 31 Dec. 1947.

The Army was preparing to announce additional promotions to major—probably about 225—as THE JOURNAL went to press.

Also announced this week were 819 promotions to warrant officer W-3, with promotions to W-4 expected to be announced momentarily.

The promotions to warrant officer grades do not include the "five per centers." They will be announced at a later

Moulton Commission Begins 'Care' Inquiry

The Defense Department Dependent Care Commission, which held its organizational meeting at the Pentagon on 27 April—a second session is scheduled for 18 May—later this week received a communication from the influential Navy League which warned that any reduction in family health benefits "would be looked upon by the men in Service as a breach of faith on the part of the Government."

The Commission, headed by Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president emeritus of the Brookings Institution of Washington, D. C., was created by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson to study the problem of dependent care and to make recommendations for a long-range program.

Dr. Moulton previously was a member of the Strauss Commission on Incentive Pay, which endorsed dependent care in its widely praised report and which also warned of the adverse effects on morale of "breach of contract" action by the Government as regards conditions of service for uniformed personnel.

Col. Ora L. Farnsworth of the Career Records-Analysis Branch of the Office of the Army Adjutant General has been named Executive Secretary of the Moulton Commission.

Designated as liaison officers to the Commission are Col. Herman F. Smith, Air Force; Comdr. Frank H. Rile, Navy; and Maj. Hollis A. Fisher, Army.

When the Commission holds its second meeting, members will consider, among other correspondence, a letter from President Frank A. Hecht of the Navy League addressed to Dr. Moulton on 28 April.

Reorganization Plan Goes To Congress

President Eisenhower took action this week to reorganize the financing and organization of the national defense program.

Mr. Eisenhower said that "as a former soldier who has experienced modern war at first hand, and now, as President and Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces of the United States, I believe that our defense establishment is in need of immediate improvement."

The President declared: "The time is here, then, to work to perfect our military establishment without delay."

Funds are to be cut—probably about $5 billion from the Truman Administration fiscal '54 new funds request of $41.3 billion. Administrative procedures are to be tightened—six additional Assistant Defense Secretaries are asked. Steps will be taken to strengthen simultaneously the JCS and the civilian control over its members.

The new Administration has prepared "a long-term program, calling for a steady and adequate flow of men and materials to present a position of genuine strength to any would-be aggressor," the President declared.

He said "we reject the idea that we must build up to a maximum attainable strength for some specific date theoretically fixed for a specified time in the future."

The President was asked if the plan for cuts in defense appropriations would mean reduced manpower for the Armed Forces.

He said that this was possible at some date in the future, but declined to specify what strength cuts, if any, are impending, or when.

There are persistent reports that the Armed Forces during fiscal '54, which begins on 1 July, may be cut by a quarter of a million men and women from the strength of 3.7 million recommended by former Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett and former President Truman.

The President was asked to comment on the recommendations which he will make for reductions in the actual defense expenditures during fiscal '54. (The Truman Administration forecast $46 billion in expenditures.)

The President said that these figures had not yet been firmed. They would become known, he stated, when the revised defense budget is sent to Capitol Hill.

The fact of the matter is that late this week Pentagon officials did not know what amounts would be asked in expenditures during fiscal '54.

Undoubtedly, this information will be made known, to the public as well as the Services, shortly after the return on 5 May of Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson from his visit to Europe.

The President, however, did not await Mr. Wilson's return to send to Congress

Contacts Fewer As Truce Talks Resume

Fighting subsided all along the front this week as full-fledged truce discussions resumed in Panmunjom. Although several clashes between enemy and United Nations forces were bitter and sharp, contacts were fewer than usual and much less intensive.

Sabre jets encountered a few groups of MIG's in MiG Alley, shooting down one and damaging three. Capt. Joseph McConnell, Jr., notched his tenth MIG kill to become the war's fifth double jet ace. Meanwhile, fighter-bombers and Naval planes continued to blast enemy supply dumps, communications lines and frontline positions.

Three American cruisers, in a daring rescue attempt, steamed through the Red harbor of Wonsan to remove wounded troops from an Allied-held island at the entrance of the port. Heavy shore fire was finally silenced by the ships and supporting Navy Panther jets. There was no official word on the success of the rescue attempt, or whether the ships were damaged.

On the central front, troops of the Fifteenth Regiment of the United States Third Infantry Division smashed a two-prong attack that rolled up against the main lines on an outpost east of Jackson Heights. An estimated 190 of possibly 750 Chinese troops were mowed down. On the eastern front, South Korean soldiers repulse a North Korean attack, killing 84 Reds and wounding an additional 34.

In one air attack, Fifth Air Force fighter-bombers destroyed 124 buildings and 51 personnel shelters during daylight raids. The next day, the planes destroyed five and damaged 15 small boats in Sojoson Bay, near Sinanju.

A formation of 12 Sabres, modified to fly as fighter-bombers, dropped bombs, rockets and jellied gasoline on red bunkers and caves opposite the main Allied line. Marine Panther jets and Corsairs blasted a Red ammunition factory and weapons repair area behind the western front.

Navy planes from the carriers Princeton and Valley Forge flattened two enemy build-up areas in northeast Korea. Returning pilots reported that the Red supply buildings and dumps burned furiously after the attack on Tanchon and Sopo, southwest of Pukchong. Participating planes were from Task Force 7 in the Japan Sea.

ENEMY MATERIEL—Brig. Gen. William Creasy, Chief of the Research and Engineer Command, Office of the Chief Chemical Officer, made a brief whirl-wind tour of the I Corps Sector in Korea recently to observe and study the chemical operations on the battle-front. Military Unrealistic and Inefficient, DepSec Kyes Tells U. S. Business Men

In the first public address from a top-side Department of Defense official, Deputy Secretary Roger M. Kyes told the U.S. Chamber of Commerce on 27 April that "unrealistic requirements, poor planning and inefficient execution" have been causing an unnecessary drain on civilian economy.

Sound management is lacking in the Department of Defense, he declared, stating: "Sound planning and efficient execution not only require clear lines of authority and responsibility, proper relations between line and staff in an organization, but most important sound and adequate management. Though your Department of Defense is the largest organization in the world, it has only a handful of men whose abilities, knowledge and experience approach the requirements of such a task."

Neglected Defenses

The Deputy Secretary, however, did not place all of the blame on the military. He recalled that after World War II and before Korea our defenses were permitted to deteriorate and declared that "we as civilians, must take our share of the blame for the conditions that resulted in part from the neglect of our military posture. Such a process repeated too often can result in consequences which make one shudder to ponder." Pertinent excerpts from Mr. Kyes address follow:

"You will remember that at the end of the second World War, we engaged in a process of rapid demobilization. Thereafter and before Korea, our military posture was permitted to deteriorate.

"Then came Korea in June of 1950. On 19 December 1950, a state of national emergency was proclaimed. Mobilization target dates were set. Huge sums of money were appropriated. The military services attempted to commit these funds as rapidly as possible. The long and tedious processes of placing our military contracts absorbed precious time. Industry proceeded with dispatch once it received the authorization upon which it could start into action.

Exaggerated Figures

"Men of industry remember well the exaggerated figures for requirements and the unrealistic schedules with which they were confronted by the military. Planning, tools, equipment and facilities were to be based upon these theoretical programs.

"With this onrush of orders came the drive for an industrial mobilization base founded upon the same theoretical calculations.

"Industry turned to the task of doing its best to meet the production targets set by the military.

"Then came the period of so-called cut backs, 'stretch outs,' and program changes, which had the effect of bringing unrealistic planning closer to the possibility of realistic accomplishment. Fantastic paper targets crumpled before the realities of the situation. Even today there are still huge sums of money obligated to be spent for items which have not yet been fabricated, nor will they be for some time.

"Unrealistic requirements, poor planning and inefficient execution all combined with the short span of time to cause waste of money, poor utilization of manpower, unnecessary drain of materials from the civilian economy, and the inefficient use of tools, equipment and facilities.

"Then, too, when dollars became abundant, the military, after slim years, refilled its storehouses and installations with many items more easily procured but not of vital importance to national security. For example, most of us would question the combat capabilities of a year's surplus supply of calculating machines.

"With the passing of each day, our money tended to lose its value. The goods and services sharply increased in cost. We could not buy as much security with our dollars when inflation began taking its toll. Even more regrettable is the fact that such an approach to national security has left us with many imbalances in our program.

Mistaken Concepts

"We have been and are paying dearly for two mistaken conceptions with respect to national security. First: unsound and unrealistic calculations of requirements for materials, equipment and supplies on the part of the military. Second: a neglect of the needs of a minimum military posture in time of peace.

"The soldier is trained from the time he enters the service to be certain of an ample supply of the materials and equipment required for his assigned missions. If you were in his position and had his training, you might take the same view.

"So this conception finds its way into the tables of requirements used by the military. As these pass from one echelon to another, through the maze, each working level appears to add safety margins, pipelines, and attrition factors, until the inflation of figures is inevitable. One mobilization plan resulted in requirements over and above assets on hand which would cost $30 billion dollars for hard goods alone. This plan, based on a hard goods production in 1952 of 78 billion dollars, would have taken all of American industry more than six years to produce if it had the proper tools, manpower and facilities.

"You may be surprised to learn that American industry produced, and this country shipped to Europe, twice as much materiel as was used in the European theater in World War II.

"On the other hand, we as civilians, must take our share of the blame for the conditions that resulted in part from the neglect of our military posture. Such a process repeated too often can result in consequences which make one shudder to ponder.

"Therefore, as civilians, we must cease to cut the military to the bone in time of peace, while on the other hand, we permit them to utilize our resources unnecessarily in time of war as a result of inflated requirements.

"If we insist that the military abandon their present attitude as claimants for absolute requirements without responsibility for economic consequences we should also insist that the civilian attitude of irresponsibility between wars should be abandoned.

Duplication and Inefficiency

"Most people familiar with the Defense Department are conscious of the duplication and inefficiency that exists. There has been much oral and written discussion; there have been a host of investigations. It is said that surveys and reports discussing the various problems of the military services have cost millions of dollars, and would fill a wing of the Pentagon. The list of committees and panels in printed form would take on the proportions of the telephone book of a large city.

"But with all these, we have failed to solve our problem and have perhaps added to the confusion.

"By what process, then, can we find a successful solution?

"We must first put our problem into proper perspective. This country is fortunate to have some of the greatest military leaders in the world. Fine and sincere people, both military and civilian, who love their country as you do are in substantial majority throughout the military establishment. They are just as much the victims of the system as you, the taxpayers, may consider yourselves.

"They need your help not your criticism. "One of the difficult problems for the services is that of procurement. While there are definite weaknesses in the armed services procurement system, the military has received much criticism to which they are not entitled. They are forced to contend with a complexity of laws and regulations, some of which were passed in the depression of 1930-

32 furthering certain objectives not entirely or directly related to the needs of military procurement. These have not only caused procurement delays, but in many cases, have forced the procurement officers to award contracts to marginal and substandard sources, in whose ability they had little confidence.

"If we expect the military to do an effective job of procurement comparable to that of American industry, we must give them the same opportunity to do so. If we are to have efficient policies and methods of stock control and distribution, we must assist them in instituting these modern practices familiar to American industry and commerce.

"They, in turn, must cooperate by utilizing commercial items wherever practical for non-military services. Specifications and requirements for both tactical and non-tactical items must be derived from intelligent thinking and sound judgment.

"They must also fully cooperate in driving out wasteful practices throughout the military establishment.

"Also, we must remedy the greatest short-coming of the military establishment if we are to get the most of our defense dollars.

"Sound planning and efficient execution not only require clear lines of authority and responsibility, proper relations between line and staff in an organization, but most important, sound and adequate management. Though your Department of Defense is the largest organization in the world, it has only a handful of men whose abilities, knowledge and experience approach the requirements of such a task. No organization has ever been strong, successful and efficient without the creative leadership that comes from a management group sufficient in number in relation to the size of the organization, and well-balanced as to qualifications to meet the complex problems that must be solved.

"Once the Secretary of Defense is provided with adequate management support to handle the task, more rapid progress can be made toward creating a hard-hitting, effective and economical organization for national security."

Army Cited for Safety

For the ninth time in the past decade, the Army has been cited by the National Safety Council for outstanding accident prevention efforts within the United States.

In addition to the Award of Honor for Safety, the Army announced that four of its major commands had been similarly recognized by the National Safety Council and also had earned the Award of Honor for 1952. The commands were USARPAC and the Second Army, both for the third straight year, and the Ordnance Corps and Third Army, both for the second straight year.

In turn, the Army cited five of its other commands for its own safety award. Recipients of this award were the Fifth Army, for the second straight year; Chemical Corps, Transportation Corps, USAREUR and USARAL.

Text of President's Message to Congress on Defense Reorganization

FOLLOWING is the text of the message delivered to Congress on 30 April by President Eisenhower, in which he outlines plans for reorganization of the Defense Department:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

I address the Congress on a subject which has been of primary interest to me throughout all the years of my adult life—the defense of our country.

As a former soldier who has experienced modern war at first hand, and now as President and Commander in Chief of the armed forces of the United States, I believe that our defense establishment is in need of immediate improvement. In this message, I indicate actions which we are taking, and must yet take, to assure the greater safety of America.

Through the years, our Nation has warded off all enemies. We have defended ourselves successfully against those who have waged war against us. We enjoy, as a people, a proud tradition of triumph in battle.

We are not, however, a warlike people. Our historic goal is peace. It shall ever be peace—peace to enjoy the freedom we cherish and the fruits of our labors. We maintain strong military forces in support of this supreme purpose, for we believe that in today's world only properly organized strength may altogether avert war.

Because we are not a military-minded people, we have sometimes failed to give proper thought to the problems of the organization and adequacy of our armed forces. Past periods of international stress and the actual outbreaks of wars have found us poorly prepared. On such occasions, we have had to commit to battle insufficient and improperly organized military forces to hold the foe until our citizenry could be more fully mobilized and our resources marshaled. We know that we cannot permit a repetition of those conditions.

Today we live in a perilous period of international affairs. Soviet Russia and her allies have it within their power to join with us in the establishment of a true peace or to plunge the world into global war. To date, they have chosen to conduct themselves in such a way that these are years neither of total war nor total peace.

We Must Gain Initiative For Free World

We in the United States have, therefore, recently embarked upon the definition of a new, positive foreign policy. One of our basic aims is to gain again for the free world the initiative in shaping the international conditions under which freedom can thrive. Essential to this endeavor is the assurance of an alert, efficient, ever-prepared defense establishment.

Today our international undertakings are shared by the free peoples of other nations. We find ourselves in an unparalleled role of leadership of free men everywhere. With this leadership have come new responsibilities. With the basic purpose of assuring our own security and economic viability, we are helping our friends to protect their lives and liberties. And one major help that we may give them is reliance upon our own military establishment.

Today also witnesses one of history's times of swiftest advance in scientific achievements. These developments can accomplish wonders in providing a healthier and happier life for us all. But—converted to military uses—they threaten new, more devastating terrors in war. These simple, inescapable facts make imperative the maintenance of a defense organization commanding the most modern technological instruments in our arsenal of weapons.

In providing the kind of military security that our country needs, we must keep our people free and our economy solvent. We must not endanger the very things we seek to defend. We must not create a nation mighty in arms that is lacking in liberty and bankrupt in resources. Our armed strength must continue to rise from the vigor of a free people and a prosperous economy.

Recognizing all these national and international demands upon our military establishment, we must remain ever mindful of three great objectives in organizing our defense.

First: Our military establishment must be founded upon our basic constitutional principles and traditions. There must be a clear and unchallenged civilian responsibility in the defense establishment. This is essential not only to maintain democratic institutions, but also to protect the integrity of the military profession. Basic decisions relating to the military forces must be made by politically accountable civilian officials. Conversely, professional military leaders must not be thrust into the political arena to become the prey of partisan politics. To guard these principles, we must recognize and respect the clear lines of responsibility and authority which run from the President, through the Secretary of Defense and the Secretaries of the military departments, over the operations of all branches of the Department of Defense.

Second: Effectiveness with economy must be made the watchwords of our defense effort. To maintain an adequate national defense for the indefinite future, we have found it necessary to devote a larger share of our national resources than any of us have heretofore anticipated. To protect our economy, maximum effectiveness at minimum cost is essential.

Need Best Plans For Action In Case Of War

Third: We must develop the best possible military plans. These plans must be sound guides to action in case of war. They must incorporate the most competent and considered thinking from every point of view—military, scientific, industrial, and economic.

To strengthen civilian control by establishing clear lines of accountability, to further effectiveness with economy, and to provide adequate planning for military purposes—these were primary objectives of the Congress in enacting the National Security Act of 1947 and strengthening it in 1949.

Now much has happened which makes it appropriate to review the workings of those basic statutes. Valuable lessons have been learned through six years of trial by experience. Our top military structure has been observed under changing conditions. The military action in Korea, the buildup of our forces everywhere, the provision of military aid to other friendly nations, and the participation of United States armed forces in regional collective security arrangements, such as those under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization—all these have supplied sharp tests of our military organization. Today, in making my specific recommendations, I have also had the benefit of the report prepared by the Committee on Department of Defense Organization established by the Secretary of Defense three months ago.

The time is here, then, to work to perfect our military establishment without delay.

I

The first objective—toward which immediate actions already are being directed—is clarification of lines of authority within the Department of Defense so as to strengthen civilian responsibility.

I am convinced that the fundamental structure of our Department of Defense and its various component agencies as provided by the National Security Act, as amended, is sound. None of the changes I am proposing affects that basic structure, and this first objective can and will be attained without any legislative change.

With my full support, the Secretary of Defense must exercise over the Department of Defense the direction, authority, and control which are vested in him by the National Security Act. He should do so through the basic channels of responsibility and authority prescribed in that act—through the three civilian Secretaries of the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force, who are responsible to him for all aspects of the respective military departments (except for the legal responsibility of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to advise the President in military matters.) No function in any part of the Department of Defense, or in any of its component agencies, should be performed independent of the direction, authority, and control of the Secretary of Defense. The Secretary is the accountable civilian head of the Department of Defense, and under the law, my principal assistant in all matters relating to the Department. I want all to know that he has my full backing in that role.

Sec. Wilson To Revise Key West Agreement

To clarify a point which has led to considerable confusion in the past, the Secretary of Defense, with my approval, will shortly issue a revision of that portion of the 1948 memorandum commonly known as the Key West Agreement which provides for a system of designating executive agents for unified commands. Basic decisions with respect to the establishment and direction of unified commands are made by the President and the Secretary of Defense, upon the recommendation of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in their military planning and advisory role. But the provision of the Key West Agreement, under which the Joint Chiefs of Staff designate one of their members as an executive agent for each unified command, has led to considerable confusion and misunderstanding with respect to the relationship of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to the Secretary of Defense, and the relationship of the military chief of each service to the civilian Secretary of his military department.

Hence, the Secretary of Defense, with my approval, is revising the Key West Agreement to provide that the Secretary of Defense shall designate in each case a military department to serve as the executive agent for a unified command. Under this new agreement, the channel of responsibility and authority to a commander of a unified command will unmistakably be from the President to the Secretary of Defense to the designated civilian Secretary of a military department. This arrangement will fix responsibility along a definite channel of accountable civilian officials as intended by the National Security Act.

It will be understood, however, that, for the strategic direction and operational control of forces, and for the conduct of combat operations, the military chief of the designated military department will be authorized by the Secretary of Defense to receive and transmit reports and orders and to act for that department in its executive agency capacity. This arrangement will make it always possible to deal promptly with emergency or wartime situations. The military chief will clearly be acting in the name and by the direction of the Secretary of Defense. Promulgated orders will directly state that fact.

By taking this action to provide clearer lines of responsibility and authority for the exercise of civilian control, I believe we will make significant progress toward increasing proper accountability in the top levels of the Department of Defense.

II

Our second major objective is effectiveness with economy. Although the American people, throughout their history, have hoped to avoid supporting large military forces, today we must obviously maintain a strong military force to ward off attack, at a moment's notice, by enemies equipped with the most devastating weapons known to modern science. This need for immediate preparedness makes it all the more imperative to see that the Nation maintains effective military forces in the manner imposing the minimum burden on the national economy.

In an organization the size of the Department of Defense, true effectiveness with economy can be attained only by decentralization of operations, under flexible and effective direction and control from the center. I am impressed with the determination of the Secretary of Defense to administer the Department on this basis and to look to the Secretaries of the three military departments as his principal agents for the management and direction of the entire defense enterprise.

Unwieldy Boards Are Too Slow, Too Clumsy

Such a system of decentralized operations, however, requires, for sound management, flexible machinery at the top. Unfortunately, this is not wholly possible in the Department of Defense as now established by law. Two principal fields of activity are rigidly assigned by law to unwieldy boards which—no matter how much authority may be centralized in their respective chairmen—provide organizational arrangements too slow and too clumsy to serve as effective management tools for the Secretary. In addition, other staff agencies have been set up in the Office of the Secretary of Defense and their functions prescribed by law, thus making it difficult for the Secretary to adjust his staff arrangements to deal with new problems as they arise, or to provide for flexible cooperation among the several staff agencies.

Accordingly, I am transmitting today to the Congress a reorganization plan which is designed to provide the Secretary of Defense with a more efficient staff organization. The plan calls for the abolition of the Munitions Board, the Research and Development Board, the Defense Supply Management Agency, and the office of Director of Installations and vests their functions in the Secretary of Defense. At the same time, the plan authorizes the appointment of new Assistant Secretaries of Defense to whom the Secretary of Defense intends to assign the functions now vested in the agencies to be abolished and certain other functions now assigned to other officials. Specifically, the reorganization plan provides for six additional assistant secretaries—three to whom the Secretary will assign the duties now performed by the two Boards (based on a redistribution of staff functions), two who will be utilized to replace individual officials who presently hold other titles, and one to be assigned to a position formerly but no longer filled by an assistant secretary. The new assistant secretary positions are required in order to make it possible to bring executives of the highest type to the Government service and to permit them to operate effectively and with less personnel than at present. In addition, the plan also provides that in view of the importance of authoritative legal opinions and interpretations the office of General Counsel be raised to a statutory position with rank substantially equivalent to that of an assistant secretary.

The abolition of the present statutory staff agencies and the provision of the new assistant secretaries to aid the Secretary of Defense will be the key to the attainment of increased effectiveness at low cost in the Department of Defense. These steps will permit the Secretary to make a thorough reorganization of the nonmilitary staff agencies in his office. He will be able to establish truly effective and vigorous staff units under the leadership of the assistant secretaries. Each assistant secretary will function as a staff head within an assigned field of responsibility.

Without imposing themselves in the direct lines of responsibility and authority between the Secretary of Defense and the Secretaries of the three military departments, the Assistant Secretaries of Defense will provide the Secretary with a continuing review of the programs of the defense establishment and help him institute major improvements in their execution. They will be charged with establishing systems, within their assigned fields, for obtaining complete and accurate information to support recommendations to the Secretary. The assistant secretaries will make frequent inspection visits to our far-flung installations and check for the Secretary the effectiveness and efficiency of operations in their assigned fields.

Study Organization Of All Three Services

Other improvements are badly needed in the Departments of the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force. Accordingly, the Secretary of Defense is initiating studies by the three Secretaries of the military departments of the internal organization of their departments with a view toward making those Secretaries truly responsible administrators, thereby obtaining greater effectiveness and attaining economies wherever possible. These studies will apply to the organization of the military departments some of the same principles of clearer lines of accountability which we are applying to the Department of Defense as a whole.

Immediate attention will also be given to studying improvements of those parts of the military departments directly concerned with the procurement and distribution of munitions and supplies and the inventory and accounting systems within each military department. We must take every step toward seeing that our armed forces are adequately supplied at all times with the materials essential for them to carry on their operations in the field. Necessary to this effort is a reorganization of supply machinery in the military departments. These studies of the organization of the military departments have my full support.

One other area for improved effectiveness is civilian and military personnel management. In this area certain specialized studies and actions are desirable. Accordingly, I have directed the Secretary of Defense to organize a study of the problems of attracting and holding competent career personnel—civilian and military—in the Department of Defense. As a part of this study, an examination of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 and its practical administration will be undertaken to see if any changes are needed. I am directing that this study also include a review of statutes governing the retirement of military officers aimed at eliminating those undesirable provisions which force the early retirement of unusually capable officers who are willing to continue on active service.

The Secretary of Defense, with my approval, is issuing revised orders relating to the preparing and signing of efficiency reports for military personnel who serve full time in the Office of the Secretary, and new instructions to the military departments to guide selection boards in their operations. These actions are aimed at giving full credit to military officers serving in the Office of the Secretary of Defense for their work for the Department of Defense as a whole. Henceforth, civilian officials who have military officers detailed to their offices on a full-time basis will be responsible for filling out and signing the formal efficiency reports for such officers for the period of such service. In the case of officers serving in the Office of the Secretary of Defense, no other efficiency reports for such service will be maintained. The Secretary of each military department is being instructed to direct the

Test Revised Inf. Regt. With 11-Man Rifle Squads

A reorganization of the basic structure of the Army Infantry regiment will be field tested at Ft. Bragg, N. C., between 15 May and 15 Oct.

Proponents of the reorganizational plan say it will increase fire power, improve tactical control and achieve more effective use of manpower. The size of the regiment would be increased from 3527 to 3659 men, the gain resulting from the assignment of two additional rifle-men to each squad—11 instead of nine.

The primary change in the over-all structure now under advisement would be the merging of the heavy weapons company of each battalion with the battalion headquarters company. However, the heavy machine-guns of the heavy weapons company would be integrated into the three rifle companies of each battalion.

The resulting administrative and supervisory manpower which would be saved by the merger would be applied elsewhere in the regiment to increase its firing potential and unit control, the Army said.

Among the other changes being considered is the increase to two the number of automatic rifles in the rifle squad. Each company would be provided with 4.2 inch mortar forward observers, and a three-man communications wire team. Under the present set up, no wire team is attached to a rifle company.

The number of regimental and wire teams also would be increased. The anti-tank mine platoon of the regimental headquarters company would be reorganized, and the regimental headquarters company counterfire platoon would be transferred to the heavy mortar company. More powerful and flexible means of voice radio communications to all elements down to and including the rifle company also would be provided.

The proposed changes were the results of a study by combat officers at the Of-

Unified Training Plan For All Army Components

A unified training format has been adopted for the three components of the Army, General John R. Hodge, Chief of Army Field Forces, announced this week.

The format prescribes the training of all like units in the Active Army, National Guard and Army Reserve. Increasing stability in the Army Reserve and National Guard troops program and the availability of training equipment now make it practicable to establish this new type of program, an announcement said.

The consolidation of the training formats is expected to result in several advantages. Training standards and objectives of Reserve component units will be keyed to those of like units in the active Army. The workload on Army service schools which prepare training literature will be reduced.

Reserve component unit commanders and their staff can become familiar with the program under which their unit would train during mobilization. Also, there will be a substantial reduction in publishing costs.

The first pilot model of the "all-component" program has been prepared at the Office of the Chief of Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va.

Under the new format, most subjects listed in the programs will apply to all like units. Since Reserve component units conduct training during armory drill periods (48 or 24 drills annually) and at summer encampments, while Active Army units train the year round, an adjustment must be made in scheduling. To do this, the time allotted to each subject is shown in three columns. One shows hours prescribed for Active Army units, the second column shows the number of hours prescribed for Reserve component units conducting 48 drills per year, and the third shows hours for 24 drill units.

Set Overseas Tours For Naval Personnel

Regulations governing the length of overseas tours for Naval personnel have been brought up to date by BuPers in a new directive which states that, except for 25 areas, tours of duty at all overseas Naval activities will be 24 months.

Areas excepted by the order cover a wide range. Personnel assigned to Eniwetok Atoll, for example, complete their overseas tour in six months; those assigned to Greenland, in nine months.

The Navy noted, however, that "Variation from the prescribed tours may be necessary to meet special conditions." The excepted areas and the length of service in months follow:

Excepted Areas

Alaska—18
Point Barrow and Adak—12
Whittier and Attu—6 (followed by rotation to complete 18 months in the area).
Eniwetok Atoll—6

Transit Time Not Counted

The tours, BuPers said, "apply to Naval personnel, except insular forces, performing overseas service at activities under Naval administration." A normal tour of overseas service is considered completed when an individual has spent the established period in the locality concerned, exclusive of transit time to and from the locality. Personnel transferred from one overseas area to another will be credited with the time served in the first area.

Honor Adm. Fahrion

Leathernecks of the Second Marine Division honored Vice Adm. F. G. Fahrion this week when the Commander, Amphibious Forces, Atlantic, visited Camp Lejeune, N. C.

From a reviewing stand, Admiral Fahrion, together with Maj. Gen. Randolph McCall Pate, Commanding General of the Second Division, and his staff, watched as members of the division demonstrated rubber boat and dry net training. The troops also breeched a barbed wire barrier and made a mock attack of a fortified position.

After the demonstration, the Division (less three battalions) paraded in honor of the visiting admiral. The parade was commanded by Brig. Gen. Robert E. Hogaboom, Assistant Division Commander.

NROTC Men Visit Lejeune

Fifty Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps Midshipmen from the University of North Carolina visited the Marine Corps Air Facility at Camp Lejeune, N. C., last week for a tour of camp installations.

The visit was requested by the midshipmen to observe Marine Corps procedures and operations to help them select a commission in the Navy or Marine Corps upon graduation from college.

Marine Transport planes flew the midships to the Peterfield Point Marine Corps Air Facility from Cherry Point's Marine Corps Air Station which they also toured. They were greeted at Lejeune by Lt. Col. W. R. Williams, camp G-3 officer.

At the Goettge Memorial Fieldhouse, Maj. Gen. Henry D. Linscott, camp commanding general, addressed the group and they were briefed on the history and operations of the camp, after which they toured the area by bus.

Need Marine Coaches

Marine officers in the rank of major, captain and first lieutenant are being asked to submit requests for assignment as athletic officers or as varsity athletic coaches.

The requests may be submitted to the Commandant of the Marine Corps (Code DFA), and should include a resume of athletic experience, civilian and military, as a player, coach or supervisor of athletic programs.

Rawlins-Shanahan Bill

The Senate Armed Services Committee this week reported out an amended version of S. 1063, which was originally drafted to obtain the promotion of Commanders Edward K. Shanahan and Edward White Rawlins, both USN-Retired.

As amended, the bill would authorize and request the President "to promote certain naval officers," not specifying the two commanders by name. It is sponsored by four members of Congress: Senators John M. Butler (R-Md.), J. Glenn Beall (R-Md.), John L. McClellan (D-Ark.), and Charles E. Potter (R-Mich.).

The requested legislation has had a long history on Capitol Hill. In its newly amended form it will be similar to S. 780 which was introduced in the 81st Congress and passed by the Senate, but not acted upon by the House.

Marines Star On Video In West Coast Program

A TV program written, produced, directed and performed by Marines is telecast weekly over KTLA-TV, Los Angeles. Called "Marines at Ease," the program utilizes talent from the Marine bases at Camp Pendleton, El Toro and San Diego.

CWO Lock

The Camp Pendleton Post Band under the direction of CWO Fred A. Lock furnishes music for the show, and a four-piece combo made up of band members supplies the background for vocals.

Produced by Capt. Roger D. Rice, Pendleton PIO, and 2d Lt. George Francis, the show is written by Lieutenant Francis, Sgt. Charles T. Hubbs, and Cpl. Joseph T. McDermott. Facilities Director is Sgt. Richard L. Bratt, and Production Assistant is Corporal McDermott.

A member of the Third Marine Division, T/Sgt. Bill Taylor, emcees the program.

The format of "At Ease" is principally entertainment with marches, popular ballads, instrumentals and novelty production numbers. Each week a four or five-minute film on a Marine hero who has been decorated for bravery in Korea is shown and he appears in person on the show. Also presented are sketches or dramatized sequences on different aspects of Marine Corps life and training.

Featured vocalists and actors are Cpl. Bill Cole, T/Sgt. Samuel Conover, Pfc. Paul Parks, T/Sgt. Robert Mehl, and Pfc. Tommy Cook.

2d Bn, 6th Marines to Med.

The Second Marine Battalion has embarked from Morehead City, N. C., for a six-month cruise in the Mediterranean, carrying with them 200 complete outfits of clothing for needy European children.

The reinforced battalion, from the 2d Division's Sixth Regiment, will cruise in the Mediterranean with the Sixth Fleet. During the six-month period, they will visit ports in France and Italy, and along the North African coast.

The clothing, collected by the Marines in a drive organized and handled by Chaplain (Lt.) Leon S. Darkowski, will be distributed in ports bordering on the Mediterranean.

MCAF, Santa Ana, Paper

The Marine Corps Air Facility at Santa Ana, Calif., began publication yesterday of a new station newspaper, The Blade, which replaces the former mimeographed publication of the same name which has been printed by the facility since shortly after its activation.

The new publication will be a four-page tabloid published by letter-press reproduction. It will continue to be supervised by the public information office and published with non-appropriated funds furnished by the Special Services Officer.

Open USMC Trailer Project

Housing problems for Marine families at Camp Pendleton, Calif., were recently reduced when Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Smith, Commanding General of the Marine Barracks there, formally opened a new trailer housing project.

Known as the South Mesa Trailer Project, the housing area is located near the main gate of Pendleton in the section formerly called "Little Tokyo." It includes 250 units which rent to the lower enlisted grades for $41.50 to $47.00, including lights, water and garbage disposal.

Begins Care Inquiry

ment is published herewith.

Mr. Hecht said his organization has become "increasingly concerned in recent years about the adequacy of medical and dental care for dependents of the personnel of the Navy."

"During my visits to Navy and Marine commands in Korea, in Europe and in many remote parts of the Atlantic and Pacific, I have had occasion to talk with hundreds of officers and men about various matters of their morale and esprit de corps."

"Foremost among these topics was the concern that each man felt for the members of his family at home and the problems that his dependents faced whenever sickness or any emergencies arose during his absence."

In addition to Dr. Moulton, the other members of the Commission include Thomas L. Parkinson, president of the Equitable Life Insurance Company; Dr. Lewis Webster Jones, president of Rutgers University; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, noted student and writer on social problems; and Dr. George W. Bachman, senior staff member in charge of health studies at Brookings Institution.

Secretary Wilson requested the Commission to make its report "at the earliest practicable date," but he set no time limit for completion of the study.

It is possible that the Commission, as was done by the Strauss Commission, will visit representative Service installations during the inquiry to get on-the-spot information and reactions.

Dr. Moulton's renown as president emeritus of the Brookings Institution, famed for its research and analysis of complicated national and international problems, and his participation on the Strauss Commission assure the Services of a thorough-going study of dependent care.

Here is the text of the letter written to Dr. Moulton by Mr. Hecht on behalf of the Navy League:

"Dear Mr. Moulton:
The Navy League of the United States welcomes the appointment by Secretary of Defense Wilson of the Commission headed by you to make a comprehensive study of policies for the provision of medical and dental care for dependents of military personnel."

"The Navy League, since its organization some fifty years ago, has been principally concerned with problems of national defense, particularly those affecting the Navy. Our interest is not confined to the size of the Navy and its role and mission, but includes also the morale and welfare of its personnel. For this reason, we have become increasingly concerned in recent years about the adequacy of medical and dental care for the dependents of the personnel of the Navy. During my visits to Navy and Marine commands in Korea, in Europe and in many remote parts of the Atlantic and Pacific, I have had occasion to talk with hundreds of officers and men about various matters affecting their morale and esprit de corps. Foremost among these topics was the concern that each man felt for the members of his family at home and the problems that his dependents faced whenever sickness or any emergencies arose during his absence. The low pay, particularly of enlisted men, makes it impossible in most instances for the service family to obtain adequate medical, dental or hospital care and in consequence these dependents must turn to the Navy for assistance. The same condition, I am sure, exists in the Army and the Air Force.

"Medical and hospital care for dependents of Navy personnel has been sanctioned by law for many years and these benefits are properly looked upon by Navy personnel as in effect a contractual obligation extending to them from the Government. Any reduction of these benefits would be looked upon by the men in service as a breach of faith on the part of the Government and a substantial reduction in indirect compensation. Curtailment of benefits, on the scale and to the extent now available with existing facilities and medical personnel, would adversely affect the morale of the Armed Services and would thereby reduce the efficiency of our national defense establishment. True economy, therefore, in the long run would not be achieved.

"For these reasons the Navy League wishes to place itself on record with your Commission as strongly favoring the continued provision of medical and dental care to the dependents of military personnel, irrespective of rank and including those who have been retired for physical disabilities or for length of service, as now provided by law or by regulations of the Navy Department.

"At the same time, the Navy League favors the most efficient possible utilization of manpower in the military establishment. In this connection, I might mention that I have recently recommended to President Eisenhower and Secretary Wilson an over-all reduction of 10% to 15% in military manpower, spread over a period of about 18 months, provided of course that the international situation does not worsen in the meantime. Therefore, the Navy League would also favor any changes that would result in the more efficient utilization of medical and dental facilities and personnel, if such changes could be made without reducing the quality or the scope of care now given dependents of military personnel.

"I should be pleased to appear before your Commission to discuss these problems if you should decide it would be helpful to you.

"Sincerely yours,
"Frank A. Hecht."

New CG at AvMED School

Brig. Gen. Edward J. Kendricks took over the command of the School of Aviation Medicine at Randolph Field, Tex., this week, succeeding Brig. Gen. Otis O. Benson, Jr., who has been assigned to General Kendricks' former post as director of medical staffing and education in the office of the Air Force Surgeon General, Washington, D. C.

For four and a half years prior to Pearl Harbor, General Kendricks was assigned to the School as head of the Department of Neuropsychiatry. He was commissioned in the Army Medical Corps in 1930, and except for a two-year tour as surgeon of the Army transport Republic, his early assignments were in aeromedical posts.

During WW II, General Kendricks was appointed surgeon of the 376th Bombardment Group, which later was to become the nucleus of the Ninth Air Force. Later he served three years as chief of the Aero Medical Laboratory in Dayton, O.

AF Needs Armament Engrs.

To meet the need for more personnel in the armament career field, the USAF Institute of Technology announced this week that an armament engineering program will be offered at the undergraduate level in designated civilian institutions beginning next September.

The program will be open to regular and reserve officers in the grades of lieutenant through lieutenant colonel, who are not over 30.

Applicants must have completed at least the first year of a standard engineering curriculum including mathematics through differential calculus, and be able to complete requirements for a baccalaureate degree during the training period, which will be a maximum of two years.

Shift Processing Group

The 2349th Personnel Processing Group will be transferred 25 July-6 August from Camp Stoneman, Calif., to Parks AFB, Calif.

During the transfer period, no personnel slated for overseas duty will be processed through Camp Stoneman. All personnel scheduled for overseas assignment subsequent to 5 August, however, will be sent to Parks AFB.

AF Reg. Boosts Prestige Of NonComs As Part of Drive

The Air Force, in continuing effort to boost the prestige of its non-commissioned officers, has released a new regulation (AFR 39-6) which spells out the responsibility of non-commissioned officers.

It is known that this regulation was an important item in the program devised by Lt. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, former USAF Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel (now CG of the Air University at Maxwell AFB, Ala.), and aimed at spurring reenlistments by giving added stature to the career airman.

The regulation—text herewith—states that "non-Commissioned officers will not be assigned duties and details which would compromise their position as airman leaders."

The Air Force said that noncoms will be provided with "advantages and prestige commensurate with their responsibilities and appropriate to their status."

The text of the new regulation follows:

1. Purpose and Scope. To establish Air Force policy relative to the responsibilities of noncommissioned officers.

2. Policy. Noncommissioned officers are those enlisted personnel chosen to exercise leadership over airmen of lesser rank. The policy of the Air Force is, therefore, to delegate to noncommissioned officers all authority necessary to exercise this leadership and to provide advantages and prestige commensurate with their responsibilities and appropriate to their status. Noncommissioned officers will not be assigned duties and details which would compromise their position as airman leaders.

3. Responsibility. As airman leaders, all non-commissioned officers are charged with an equal and continuous obligation, both on and off duty, for the advancement of individual and group proficiency, discipline, morale, and esprit de corps. Fulfillment of this obligation requires:

a. Knowledge of leadership techniques and personnel management; and full acceptance of the responsibilities related thereto.

b. Timely execution of responsibilities without continuous supervision.

c. A thorough knowledge and a high level of proficiency in the Air Force Specialty to which assigned.

d. Planning, supervising, and conducting individual and team on-the-job training in technical and military subjects.

e. Maintenance of a high standard of behavior including individual conduct, courtesy, and personal appearance.

f. Supervision and correction of subordinates in matters pertaining to duty performance, individual conduct, courtesy, and personal appearance.

g. Assisting individual airmen in adapting to their military environment and adjusting to their duty and organizational assignment.

h. Personal regard for the welfare of subordinates through continuous observation and attention to:

- (1) Food, clothing, and living quarters.
- (2) Sanitation and health.
- (3) Recreation and education.
- (4) Impartial treatment of airmen.
- (5) Fair and equitable use of passes and leaves.
- (6) Support of justified grievances of subordinates.
- (7) Assistance, wherever possible, in the resolution of individual personal problems.

Staff College

D. C. Emmons, USAF, and Vice Adm. J. L. Hall, Jr., USN, preceded the present Commandant from the Army.

Stressing joint action the faculty of the College is composed of an equal number of senior officers of the three Services.

The staff and faculty are freed from housekeeping duties by a Naval Administrative Command, under a Captain USN, which is responsible for the maintenance and support of the College.

The faculty is divided into seven academic divisions, whose titles are strikingly like those of a joint staff: (1) Personnel, Civil Affairs and Military Government, (2) Intelligence, (3) Plans and Operations, (4) Logistics, (5) Academic Planning, (6) Communications and Electronics, and (7) Research and Development.

Within the five months' course of instruction, so much is given to the student that he cannot become an expert in all phases of staff work, but he is expected to be familiar with and recognize the problems confronting all staff sections on the staff of a large unified command or commander of a major joint force. Principles rather than detailed techniques are emphasized, and by guiding the student in his study the instruction endeavors to furnish graduates a sound basic knowledge of accepted principles with which to face problems confronting commands and staffs to which they may be ordered.

Since the students are all specially selected officers, usually Commanders, Lieutenant Colonels or above having a composite average service of over fifteen years, every effort is made to use the individual officer's specialized knowledge in the instruction presented at the College. Students participate in group discussions, and some formal presentations.

The instruction is divided broadly into three phases, (1) orientation, (2) joint operations, and (3) a final problem. During the orientation phase the student learns about the other services and is introduced to joint planning. The joint operations phase covers all aspects of joint operations, drawing heavily upon actual operations of World War II for their historical value, but keeping up-to-date with the latest approved doctrines and techniques, both joint and unilateral. During the last five weeks the solution of a final problem employing major forces of all three Services allows the student to put into practice all that he has learned.

Additionally certain general background knowledge dealing with friendly countries and potential enemies is presented. Maximum use is made of a conference system employing the best available civilian and military talent to present selected phases of the course of instruction.

Since August, 1946, twelve classes have graduated a total of 2030 officers of the Armed Forces of the U. S. Many of these graduates are now serving on joint staffs. To verify the adequacy of our instruction, all of the principal commanders in Europe were questioned regarding the caliber of the graduates of the Armed Forces Staff College, and the universal reply can be summed up in the phrase, "We wish we had more of your graduates." The graduates themselves were likewise appreciative of the instruction and knowledge acquired at the College.

One of the most beneficial effects obtained at the College is not included in the curriculum, but is the intimate knowledge of the Services, other than his own, that the student acquires. With eleven apartment buildings, sixteen apartments to each building, located in very close proximity, it makes for a personal and intimate knowledge of one's neighbor. As officers from the several Services are deliberately intermingled throughout, all this leads to a more thorough understanding. Besides the assignment of quarters so as to "mix" the several Services, all activities of the College have the same end in view and the result can be said to be successful orientation. By living, working, and playing together, unification takes on a more personal aspect and invariably bears fruit on joint staffs. Even in unilateral assignments the friendships and intimate knowledge, as well as the instruction, gained at the Armed Forces Staff College are helping officers to solve their problems of joint nature more readily.

"It is wrong to start with dollars, and then try to fit armament into a pre-determined dollar figure. It is right to start with the needs of national security; and then consider whether the necessary dollars are available to pay for that security."—SENATOR STUART SYMINGTON.

Production and Military Goals. Some of the sting is taken out of Deputy Secretary of Defense Roger M. Kyes' indictment of our military services by that portion of his address pointing out that civilians must take their "share of the blame for the conditions that resulted in part from the neglect of our military posture." The "blame" to which he evidently referred was the huge expenditures and production orders necessitated when the outbreak in Korea caught our defense forces at a low ebb following a period of over-economy and neglect.

Mr. Kyes' speech should be assessed in the light of the fact that he was a business executive speaking before a group of business executives in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. For example, his charges that the military indulged in "unrealistic requirements, poor planning and inefficient execution" should be related to the fact that he was speaking almost purely in business terms—"inventories," "current replacement value of the capital assets of the Department of Defense," and comparisons of the Armed Services' expenditures and employment with farming and industrial corporations. In seeking economies and efficient management these factors must, of course, be kept in mind, but there must also be a realization that military defenses can not be justified on profit and loss statements. War or preparation against war is always a financial loss—it is, in fact, an insurance premium that must be paid to safeguard our security and our way of life.

As to Mr. Kyes' evaluation of our military leadership, one should also remember that while he makes the damaging statement that the Department of Defense "has only a handful of men whose abilities, knowledge and experience approach the requirements of such a task" (referring to "sound and efficient management") he is in that instance apparently viewing them as he would business executives. This must be so, for in another portion of the address he says we are "fortunate to have some of the greatest military leaders in the world. Fine and sincere people, both military and civilian, who love their country as you do are in substantial majority throughout the military establishment."

It is significant to note Mr. Kyes made no mention of new mobilization goals or target dates for reaching those already established. He spoke of "exaggerated figures for requirements," but in its context this statement quite evidently was aimed at the money and production phases, for he made no reference one way or the other to such approved goals as the 20 Army Divisions, 408 Navy combatant vessels and 143 Air Force wings. It is on these latter goals which the military leadership speaks with professional authority and experience.

In light of the fact that the Department of Defense and the military departments now have such great business and production talent in their top echelons, every effort should be made to correlate this outstanding ability with that of our military leaders. There can be no effective military defense without the establishment and recognition of standards of size, composition and equipment of the military forces needed to provide such defense. With such standards approved by the civilian leadership, with the advice and professional views of the military, the new top leadership could apply its very special ability along the lines of procurement and production.

Widows' Compensation

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Thank you for publishing information concerning death compensation for the surviving families of Armed Forces personnel. Most servicemen are not aware of the content of present death compensation laws.

All regular servicemen's widows do not receive $167.90 per month, as stated in the table of proposed adjustments. All reserve servicemen's widows do not receive compensation under the Federal Employees Compensation Act.

Widows of regular and reserve servicemen lost during previous wars (when free government life insurance was not available) are receiving $75 per month death compensation. The annuity from insurance—if any insurance is left—is not $92.90 as stated, but barely one-half of that amount.

Death compensation in 1918 for World War I widows was $30 per month. The last increase by Congress was in 1948, to $75 per month, to meet the increase in the cost of living. Recently the Chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee refused to introduce a bill similar to the Defense Department's measure because the estimated cost is too great. Economy in government must be practiced. Taxes must be reduced.

Will widows of deceased servicemen now on death compensation rolls of the Veterans Administration be included in the Defense Department's proposed adjustments? If the proposal is to apply to future widows only, then inequities will continue to exist. The time of a serviceman's death will determine whether or not his survivors are entitled to compensation based on a percentage of salary.

"Equal Justice Under Law" is the motto inscribed above the doors of the Department of Justice. In wars previous to the Korean conflict men also made the supreme sacrifice to preserve a better way—the American way—of life. Is it "American" to give each widow $75 per month death compensation, irrespective of the salary of the serviceman on whom compensation is based? In the House Armed Services Committee I was told that the cost of bread is the same for every widow, therefore it follows that the same sum of compensation should be paid to each.

The cost of bread is also the same for all active duty personnel. By the same logic, why not pay the same salary to recruits and sergeants, to generals and lieutenants? Are we inadvertently perpetuating among the families of our war dead the very mode of living so contrary to the principles for which sacrifice was made? Furthermore, when we plan to use one yardstick to compensate present widows, and another yardstick to compensate future widows of servicemen "Equal Justice Under Law" becomes rather ambiguous.

War does not make casual millionaires of military men. Many military men become war casualties before they are 30 years of age. The difference between the monthly salary of a serviceman and the $75 monthly death compensation for his widow is also a "tax." It is the "tax" paid for the privilege of making the supreme sacrifice to keep America free. This is the first "tax" Congress should concentrate on reducing. It can be done by amending present laws governing death compensation so as to reflect the Defense Department's proposed adjustments for all servicemen's widows now on death compensation rolls. All future widows of servicemen would be automatically included.

Since the injustices are so obvious and of such long standing, action to remedy matters should be taken without delay.

2d Inf. Lost Punch Bowl

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The 2d Infantry Regiment is re-

tant secretaries for consultation on industrial problems. This has not been so in the past few years; under the current organization chart the Chief of Ordnance, for example, can not go to his civilian superiors for advice—he must wait until he is called. Restoring this line of communication would help the procuring and manufacturing services and more completely utilize the exceptional top-side talent now in the Department.

Indeed, as Mr. Kyes told the Chamber of Commerce in discussing the military leaders:

"They need your help not your criticism."

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

Malaria control units are now part of all Naval and Marine amphibious forces in tropical war zones where epidemics threaten the health of the men and the success of their military missions.

50 Years Ago—

A plea was made for the organization of the Marine Corps on the basis of regiments, battalions and companies, it being urged that the efficiency of the Corps would be increased by giving it a permanent organic form; it would stimulate the spirit of emulation so that when a man knew he was to belong to a certain company he would do his utmost to increase its prestige; regimental traditions would be preserved by distinctive badges, as in the Army; men would re-enlist if certain that they were going back to their former officers and outfits; it would develop a finer esprit and a higher level of efficiency.

During the last two or three days we have news of civil war in Japan. According to treaty, the Tycoon opened to European trade, on the first of January this year, the ports of Hiogo and Osaka. To the opening of these ports, the Princes Satsuma and Chosui, and some others, objected, they wanting some of their own ports opened that they might share in the revenues of their country as well as the Tycoon.

constituting its trophy room and is attempting to locate lost and misplaced trophies, mementos, pictures, and related material. Of particular interest is the present location of the 2d Infantry Regiment Punch Bowl.

This Punch Bowl is described in records as approximately 24 inches in diameter and consists of a silver outer bowl, or shell, with "2d Infantry" inscribed, and an inner bowl, or liner, of glass. There is a silver ladle.

Information received from the Department of the Army Records Center, Kansas City Mo., indicates that the Punch Bowl was transferred to the 7th Infantry Regiment Officers' Club on 20 Sept. 1946, was turned in to G-4, 3d Infantry Division, 4 Jan. 1947 and, subsequently on 6 Aug. 1947, donated to the Post Officers' Club, Ft. Campbell, Ky. Further documentation is not available and there is a presumption that the Punch Bowl, and the records pertaining thereto, might have been destroyed in the fire which completely razed the Post Officers' Club at Ft. Campbell on or about 6 July 1948.

Since information received from Fort Campbell indicates that the Punch Bowl was not listed among the property destroyed by the fire, and subsequent inquiry failed to reveal conclusively that the Bowl was destroyed, the possibility exists that it might be in the possession of some individual or a bank for safe-keeping.

It is hoped that your readers may be able to furnish information which will assist in locating the Bowl, or in conclusively establishing its destruction.

Report Of Rockefeller Committee Released

Recommends: Clarification of Roles And Missions Of The Services; Changes To Joint Chiefs Structure; Transfer of Responsibility For Unified Commands

THE long-awaited report of the Rockefeller Committee on Department of Defense Organization was released late yesterday following President Eisenhower's message to Congress recommending adoption of certain of the proposals.

The Committee's report stressed "four compelling objectives" which the reorganization should attempt to achieve. These were: clearer lines of authority and responsibility within the Defense Department; clarification of the roles and missions of the Services by the Defense Secretary; planning based on the most effective use of modern scientific and industrial resources; and maximum economies without injuring military strength.

Appointed by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson on 18 February, the Committee completed its work three weeks ago today.

With reference to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Committee said the role of their chairman should be clarified, the subordinate staff structure should be improved and the executive responsibility for each unified command should be assigned to a military department.

The text of the Report follows:

Introduction

The United States is faced with the continuing challenge of providing adequate national defense without wrecking the national economy.

Since the National Security Act was enacted in 1947, the invasion of Korea and the repeated evidence of Communist hostility throughout the world has made it unmistakably clear that our Nation must maintain a strong military position or risk destruction by potential enemies—enemies whose progress in the modern arts of war now match the ruthlessness of their political principles.

Under these circumstances, we believe that the American people will support the President and the Secretary of Defense in establishing an organization in the Department of Defense which is capable of providing the Nation with maximum security at minimum cost and without danger to our free institutions, based on the fundamental principle of civilian control of the Military Establishment.

A major step in this direction was taken with the passage of the National Security Act, which was intended to (1) provide through the Secretary of Defense a central organization for the exercise of direction, authority, and control over the entire Department of Defense, in order to establish policies and to assist the President in carrying out his responsibilities and functions as Commander in Chief; and (2) set up a decentralized organization for administration through the three military departments.

It was not expected in 1947 when the National Security Act was adopted, or in 1949 when it was amended, that the national security organization should be closed to further improvement. While its fundamental principles are still sound, experience indicates that it needs to be amended, and that the organization and procedures of the Department of Defense need to be improved in order to attain four compelling objectives:

- (1) The lines of authority and responsibility within the Department must be made clear and unmistakable.
- (2) The Secretary of Defense must be able to clarify the roles and missions of the services.
- (3) Planning must be based on the most effective use of our modern scientific and industrial resources.
- (4) The organization of the Department must be able to effect maximum economies without injuring military strength and its necessary productive support.

The Department of Defense cannot now attain these four objectives in full. They can be attained only if, by the necessary statutory amendments and necessary changes in organization and procedures, the Secretary of Defense is given the following tools of sound management:

- (1) Clear and effective authority over the entire defense organization, and control over the principal personnel, civilian and military in the Department of Defense;
- (2) A system to provide him with complete, accurate, and understandable information on which to base decisions; and
- (3) An independent audit of programs and of efficiency of performance, by physical inspection where necessary.

With the aid of such tools and with the support of the President and the Congress, the Secretary can carry out the recommendations below.

The purposes of these recommendations are, in summary, as follows:

- (1) To clarify the authority of the Secretary of Defense;
- (2) To clarify the command channels within the Department, especially to strengthen the status of the Secretaries of the military departments;
- (3) To increase the ability of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to serve as the top military planning and advisory group by—
 - (a) Clarifying the role of their Chairman;
 - (b) Enabling their other members better to discharge their obligation to the Department as a whole;

- (c) Improving the subordinate staff structure;
- (d) Clarifying executive responsibility for unified commands.

(4) To abolish those statutory boards in the Office of the Secretary of Defense which have proved too unwieldy and rigid for their task, and to give the Secretary of Defense instead an adequate number of Assistant Secretaries to perform his essential staff functions;

(5) To enable the Secretary of Defense to safeguard the promotional prospects of officers who serve in his Office.

1. Authority of the Secretary of Defense

The direction, authority, and control of the Secretary over all agencies of the Department, including the three military departments, which should continue to be separately organized for effective administration, should be confirmed by decisive administrative action, and if necessary by statutory amendment.

Of all those who submitted statements or gave advice to the committee, not one disagreed with the view that the Secretary of Defense should have complete and effective authority over the entire Department of Defense. (In this report the Deputy Secretary of Defense is assumed to be the alter ego of the Secretary.) There is, nevertheless, a long record of challenges based on a legalistic argument that the phrase in the National Security Act which requires that the three military departments be "separately administered" is a limitation on the authority of the Secretary of Defense, especially with respect to functions assigned directly to the military departments by statute. These arguments have been intensified by statutes, enacted since the passage of the National Security Act, which vest powers directly in the military departments. Some officials have contended that such powers are to be administered independently of the Secretary of Defense.

This committee has received an opinion from its counsel and the General Counsel and Assistant General Counsel of the Department of Defense, which states that such challenges have no basis in either the language of the laws in question, or in their legislative intent.

NEW AMBASSADOR. Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, recently appointed Ambassador to Italy from the United States, is shown on her arrival in Naples, where she was greeted by Admiral Robert B. Carney, left, USN, NATO Commander-in-Chief of Southern Europe and the senior U. S. officer in the area.

NATO's Future Combat Efficiency—

BOTH Secretary of State Dulles and Harold E. Stassen, Director of Mutual Security, returned this week from the Atlantic Council meeting in Paris with the belief that agreements made there will improve NATO's combat efficiency by "about a third." The measurement factors are a bit amorphous, and it is difficult to demonstrate to the non-diplomat's satisfaction that there will be betterment in any such precise terms, but any betterment at all—rather than the deterioration which alarmists were predicting a few weeks ago—will do.

It seems to be taken for granted that the Congressional appropriation for foreign aid in the coming fiscal year will be somewhat less than the $7.6 billion in Mr. Truman's preliminary budget. The uncertainty is over the amount of the cut and also its distribution. An administration aim seems to be the laudable one of getting more results for less money, and if Mr. Dulles' hopes for its achievement are borne out everyone ought to be happy, temporarily anyway. An increase in offshore procurement (particularly of British and French fighter planes as mentioned in these columns last week) holds a possibility of doing exactly that.

THE REVISED LAND TARGET

for 1953 appears to be 56 divisions, with most of the six additions in the realm of reserves instead of active units. There had been hope of ten additions before the New Year, but here as elsewhere a moderate stretch-out appears to be called for. Six new divisions in the bag are a good deal better than ten in the bush, and a downward compromise on that issue is certainly tolerable if, in exchange, we can count on an upward qualitative grading of the reserve divisions at hand. As the peace offensive spreads, the emphasis on reserves' efficiency becomes more meaningful.

THE THREE-YEAR PROGRAM (subject to home ratification by all nations) for construction of airfields and communications works, largely in France, is an achievement of primary importance, and it is hoped that the necessary legislative approval will come quickly. This $770,000,000 expenditure is what has been urged over a long period, and the leveling-out of objections to the pro-rating of costs called for some earnest arguments at the Council level. It is the plan of assessment which has troubled several nations, France reluctant to pay a large amount for construction of facilities which beyond doubt are international in character, lesser nations reluctant to pay for those facilities which, undoubtedly international, are undeniably on French soil. The compromise leaves America with 42.5 per cent of the total, but if it wins approval of all the nations involved, its value will not be measured solely in dollars.

AT THE SENATE COMMITTEE HEARING it was indicated that the Council had emphasized strongly the importance of the European Defense Community. It is most earnestly hoped that something of this unanimity will be communicated to the parliaments of the six nations involved. West Germany's role in future western defense is still so massive that Bonn holds the center of the stage. There is German party pressure upon President Theodor Heuss to sign without further delay the compacts which lately passed the Bundestag, ignoring the failure of the Bundesrat to acquiesce until there should be guidance from the court as to constitutionality. Chancellor Adenauer, with commendable caution, appears unwilling to force executive action, presumably in the belief that, desirable as is the expedition of treaty-signing, excessive haste might sacrifice certainty. And it is certainty that is important.

FRENCH POLITICAL WIZARDS have viewed last Sunday's municipal elections with knowing eyes, but as usual emerge with conflicting explanations of what happened, plus a suggestion that the supplemental elections this Sunday be awaited. About all that is clearly indicated from the first run is a severe loss by the Gaullist party. If this be disaster, a great many friends of France can bear up bravely. They might even stand a little more of the same, so grievous have been the injuries which General deGaulle has done to western cooperation in the past. Such gains as the Communists recorded in known Communist areas are regretted, but are not necessarily of great importance if, as hoped, the Pinay supporters have gained still more, and Premier Mayer's party has about held its own.

IN INDO-CHINA developments are still uncertain. The French-Union command has moved troops to strategic positions in Laos in the hope of blocking the three-pronged Red advances toward the Laotian capital of Luang-prabang. There is no present indication of major activities in Vietnam itself, against the rebels' widely extended flank and rear. But the Reds' successes in Laos have been gained by use of troops which were in Vietnam, and French-Union forces near Hanoi would appear to be freed thereby for assaulting the enemy's communications; such an action could prove more productive than the struggle at the distant front in Laos. The coming week should show some interesting results in both areas.

SUEZ NEGOTIATIONS continued through the week, without notable progress. This is not surprising, when one realizes the difficulty which the Egyptian negotiators would have in announcing any relaxing of their loudly proclaimed determination to eject Britain completely and finally. Time often accomplishes a good deal. Premier Naguib's intelligence is respected, and the military facts of Suez are readily discernible. The well-knit British complex of land and air bases beside the canal is of incomparable importance to the permanent defense of the whole Middle East, in which Egypt has a large interest. These huge facilities cannot be transplanted to Cyprus, and would not be so potent at a distance, anyway, in the not unlikely event of troubles east of Suez. The world's needs have not greatly altered since last year's proposal for an international Middle East command in which the several interested nations would all have responsibility. The present two-party negotiations must strengthen that realization.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

President Questions Retirements—President Eisenhower's questioning this week of current legislation requiring mandatory retirement of many senior officers before attainment of the statutory age recalls that one of his classmates at West Point recently left active duty as a result of this situation.

General James A. Van Fleet, former Eighth Army CG, and with President Eisenhower a 1915 graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, was retired at age 61 upon the attainment of 35 years' service and 5 years in the permanent grade of major general, although the statutory retirement age is 62.

In the Air Force, some general officers have been retired under the 35 and 5 provision of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 as young as 52 years of age. Generally speaking, the Army retains such officers until age 60.

The President directed that a study be made of statutes governing the retirement of military officers. He said the study should be "aimed at eliminating those undesirable provisions which force the early retirement of unusually capable officers who are willing to continue on active service."

THE JOURNAL has pointed out that because the more outstanding officers are selected first for permanent promotions, in many cases these persons are being retired in advance of contemporaries who may nonetheless hold the same temporary rank.

The President probably examined this confusing situation when General Van Fleet's retirement came up.

In view of the White House "interest" in the retirement provisions of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, it is to be expected that remedial action will be forthcoming—possibly in an amendment to the Officer Personnel Act.

Military Leaders and Politics—Pentagon observers noted with special interest President Eisenhower's declaration this week that "professional military leaders must not be thrust into the political arena to become the prey of partisan politics."

His statement came on the heels of a Capitol Hill demand, widely credited to Senator Robert A. Taft (R-Ohio), for the immediate replacement of the present members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff because of their role in defense planning in the Truman Administration.

President Eisenhower said that the integrity of the military profession must be protected and emphasized that "there must be a clear and unchallenged civilian responsibility in the defense establishment."

During the recent ammunition hearings, as was pointed out in THE JOURNAL of 28 March, there was considerable confusion as to the scope of civilian responsibility and control. During the questioning of General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, members of the Senate Armed Services repeatedly asked questions regarding matters which General Collins maintained were not within his province, but rather were within the area of responsibility and control of the civilian Secretaries.

tive history. The committee believes that this interpretation is correct. The committee further believes that the intent, purpose, and requirements of the National Security Act are fulfilled provided that the three military departments continue to be separately organized and administered by their respective Secretaries subject to the direction, authority, and control of the Secretary of Defense.

The Secretary of Defense exercises his authority under the National Security Act subject to the overriding authority of the President as Chief Executive and Commander in Chief. The President, as Commander in Chief and as head of the executive branch, is free to deal directly with subordinates of the Secretary of Defense, including the military chiefs of the services. In time of war the President as Commander in Chief can be expected to assume much more active command over strategic operations, but this is not in any way inconsistent with the National Security Act provision "that the Secretary of Defense shall be the principal assistant to the President in all matters relating to the Department of Defense."

2. The Secretaries of the Military Departments

The Secretaries of the military departments, subject to the direction, authority, and control of the Secretary of Defense, should be the operating heads of their respective departments in all aspects, military and civilian alike.

The Secretaries of the military departments occupy positions which carry enormous responsibilities for the security of the Nation. Each military department is far larger than the War and Navy Departments combined in the days before World War II. The administrative operations with which each is charged are more extensive than those of any Cabinet department outside Defense. In addition, the Secretaries are the principal civilian advisers to the Secretary of Defense on the entire range of problems within the Department.

The Secretary of each military department carries full responsibility for the administration of his department. No witness disagreed with the principle that the military chief of each service should be completely subject to the direction of civilian authority.

The Committee believes that, to provide the proper method of enforcing responsibility, it is essential to have single channel of command or line of administrative responsibility within the Department of Defense and each of the military departments.

It does not believe that it is possible (for administrative purposes) to make a sufficiently clear distinction between military affairs, on the one hand, and on the other hand civilian affairs (such as political, economic, and industrial affairs) to serve as a practicable basis for dividing responsibility between military and civilian officers, or for establishing two parallel lines of command.

Except in emergency, the President and Secretary of Defense can be expected to give orders to military officers through the channels of their civilian secretaries. But even in emergency cases, when orders or instructions are sent directly to military officers, such a channel of communication does in no sense take the military chief of a service out from under his responsibility to the Secretary of his military department, or relieve him of the obligation to keep his service Secretary fully informed.

If the Secretaries of the military departments are to discharge fully their responsibilities, it will be necessary to apply to each military department some of the principles recommended in this report regarding the Department of Defense as a whole. The limitations of time have made it impossible for the Committee to deal with the internal problems of the three military departments, but it is vital for the efficient operation of the Department of Defense as a whole that the organization of the military departments be thoroughly reviewed and adjusted in the light of the recommendations of the Committee.

The Joint Secretaries

The meetings of the Secretaries of the three military departments, which were instituted informally under the title "the Joint Secretaries," and were followed by the practice of having meetings of the three Secretaries with either the Secretary or Deputy Secretary of Defense presiding, should be continued. The past Secretary of Defense found such meetings useful to help decide policy matters in which all the service Secretaries were concerned.

The Joint Secretaries, under the guidance of the Secretary of Defense, should be in effect a meeting of the general managers of the Department of Defense and the military departments. In these meetings the Secretary of Defense may set policy for the Department as a whole, with particular emphasis on problems relating to improvement in the organization of the Department and simplification of its procedures. Such meetings—to which the Secretary could, of course, Invite such other advisers as he might wish—should help to provide the Secretary of Defense with the support he requires in solving the administrative problems of the Department, and should enable the service Secretaries to coordinate their thinking with that of the Secretary of Defense.

3. The Joint Chiefs of Staff

The Joint Chiefs of Staff are the principal military advisers to the President, the National Security Council, and the Secretary of Defense. The country looks to the Joint Chiefs of Staff to see that the military plans of the United States are fully adequate to cope with the challenge of any enemy. While such plans must be based primarily on military factors, they should also take into account a wide range of political and economic factors and should incorporate the most advanced developments of modern science and technology.

JCS plans must provide for the defense of the Nation as a whole. The members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, although they are also the military chiefs of their services, must rise above the particular views of their respective services and provide the Secretary of Defense with advice which is based on the broadest conception of the national interest. It should be explicitly acknowledged that the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in the performance of their duties as such, must not be restricted by service positions or instructions.

It has been proposed that the difficulties inherent in the dual role of the service members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff should be removed by the creation of a single Chief of Staff, or a single General Staff, or by giving the present Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff authority to vote or to settle disagreements. These proposals are advanced particularly by those who believe that the present definition of the roles and missions of the services lacks clarity and invites competition among them. The Committee has considered these proposals carefully. It recognizes the difficulties which are inherent in the present arrangement. Nevertheless, it believes that present conditions do not justify the adoption of any of these proposals. It believes that its own recommendations will provide an effective solution to the current problem.

It is essential to keep in mind that the Joint Chiefs of Staff were established as a planning and advisory group, not to exercise command. The National Security Act emphasized their planning and advisory role. The Committee considers it unfortunate that this concept of the National Security Act has always been obscured in actual practice, even before the meetings in 1948 at Key West and Newport, at which the Secretary of Defense delegated certain command functions to the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

To clarify the role of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in accord with the basic purposes of the National Security Act, this Committee recommends below that the Key West agreement be revised to remove the command function from the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in order to enable them to work more effectively as a unified planning agency.

The Committee believes that the Secretary of Defense has much to gain from receiving the various views of the military chiefs of (Please turn to Page 1068) the services, and that it is desirable for the top planning body to continue to include the responsible military chiefs, who will thus have a voice in the JCS planning as well as implementing such planning in their respective military departments.

If this system is to be made to work effectively, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, without detracting from the function of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as a group to serve as the principal military advisers to the Secretary of Defense, should be given the authority and responsibility for organizing the subordinate structure of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Joint Staff in such a way as to help the Secretary of Defense discharge his total responsibilities. This will enable him to bring into Joint Chiefs of Staff planning at all levels a variety of points of view, including those based on scientific and technical background and knowledge.

The Committee emphasizes that it is of the utmost importance that military planning should be strengthened by the consideration, in the early stages of staff work, of the independent points of view of other parts of the Office of the Secretary of Defense and of those of various specialists, and that the Secretary of Defense, when making decisions, should have a thorough knowledge of the background of each issue.

By the principles recommended above, the civilian control of the Department of Defense can be made increasingly effective without detracting from the professional status of the military chiefs or from their ability to carry out the assigned roles and missions of their respective services.

(a) The importance of a close relationship between the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff cannot be overemphasized.

The Secretary of Defense, in order to carry out his responsibility effectively, should be kept fully informed of the deliberations of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and of their respective opinions on major issues. This is necessary in order that he and the President may make major operational and command decisions with the fullest possible understanding of the issues involved. It is also necessary so that the Secretary and the President may, within the framework of the National Security Act, clarify and revise from time to time the assignment of roles and missions to the several services, and thus make the most effective adjustment of our defense organization to new developments in strategy and in weapons and to take maximum advantage of opportunities for economy. This direct relation between the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff does not take the individual military chiefs out from under the authority of the Secretaries of their respective departments, or relieve them of the obligation to keep those Secretaries fully informed, as explained in section 2 above.

While the purpose of the chiefs should be to reach an agreement on what is right and best to do in the national interest, their primary joint role is that of advisers to the Secretary of Defense and the President, and, to both, knowledge of the full reasoning behind unanimous recommendations is as essential as knowledge of the reasoning behind issues on which there may be disagreement.

The primary function of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is to give advice and to make recommendations. In their deliberations they do not vote, but attempt through a review of the facts to come to agreement regarding their recommendations. Even a unanimous agreement among them on an important matter is subject to review by the Secretary of Defense and the President.

The Committee recommends that the Secretary continue the present practice of attending meetings of the Joint Chiefs of Staff from time to time, alone or with his principal assistants. In addition, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff has the responsibility for bringing to the attention of the Secretary the varying points of view of all members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

While the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of State meet in the National Security Council, it facilitates the work of the National Security Council on major policies to have the State and Defense Departments cooperate closely on current operational problems. For this reason, the present practice of frequent meetings between the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the appropriate Assistant Secretaries of State should be continued, and from time to time it may be appropriate for the Secretaries of State and Defense themselves to take part in those meetings.

(b) In order to devote more of their time to their primary duties, the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff should be encouraged to delegate their less important duties both (1) as chiefs of the services, to their deputies in their respective services, and (2) as the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to subordinate committees.

The tremendous burdens of the military chiefs, both in their respective services and as members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, can be carried only if they delegate freely to their subordinates. A superior officer who delegates authority to subordinates to execute the duties for which he is responsible does not lessen, by the act of delegation, his own responsibility for the proper exercise of that authority. Only by adequate delegation can such authority be effectively exercised. This commonly accepted principle should be applied within the Joint Chiefs of Staff organization as well as in the service chain of command.

The heavy administrative pressure on the chiefs within the military services seriously restricts the time and thought that they can devote as individuals to their deliberations in the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Personal visits to strategic areas and domestic installations, testimony before congressional committees, the normal administrative activities pertaining to their offices—all these are heavy demands on the time of a responsible Chief of Staff. These duties should be delegated insofar as possible.

The principal responsibility of the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff must be to the President and the Secretary of Defense. Their planning and advisory work as members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff constitutes their primary duty. For this purpose, the Secretary of Defense can require of each of them whatever time is necessary.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff should establish a top-level subcommittee of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, along the lines of a Deputy JCS. Insofar as possible authority to act on those matters which do not warrant review and action by the Joint Chiefs of Staff should be delegated to this subcommittee.

(c) The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, without detracting from the function of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as a group to serve as the principal military advisers to the Secretary of Defense, should be given the authority and responsibility for organizing the subordinate structure of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Joint Staff in such a way as to help the Secretary of Defense to discharge his total responsibilities.

The selection of the Director of the Joint Staff by the Joint Chiefs should be subject to approval by the Secretary of Defense. The members of the committees of the Joint Chiefs and the members of the Joint Staff should all serve in such positions subject to the approval of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs. The Director of the Joint Staff, under the direction of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, should be fully responsible for managing all aspects of the JCS subordinate structure, including its secretariat, secretariat, committees, and staff groups. The Chairman, under the authority of the Secretary of Defense, should have the authority necessary to appoint consultants to the Joint Chiefs of Staff from outside the Department of Defense, and to set up such ad hoc committees as he may consider necessary to advise the Joint Chiefs.

The National Security Act gives the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff the duty to "provide agenda for meetings of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and assist the Joint Chiefs of Staff to prosecute their business as promptly as practicable." One purpose of this provision was to enable the Chairman to help the Joint Chiefs to concentrate on their all-important responsibility for strategic planning by relieving them from dealing with many detailed matters.

The Committee therefore recommends that the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff should feel free, if a matter is referred to the Joint Chiefs of Staff which he believes could be more appropriately handled by a military department, to refer it to the Office of the Secretary of Defense with a recommendation that it be assigned to a military department for consideration or action. With respect to any matter which is to be considered by the Joint Chiefs of Staff organization, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (or on his behalf the Director of the Joint Staff) should determine which matters merit the attention of the Joint Chiefs, and which are not of sufficient importance to come before the Joint Chiefs and can either be delegated to the Deputy Joint Chiefs of Staff, or can be handled by the Joint Staff.

The Committee believes that the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Director of the Joint Staff should be given the responsibility for arranging, and should be directed to arrange, for the cooperation of committees and staff groups of the Joint Chiefs of Staff with other parts of the Office of the Secretary of Defense in the early stages of staff work on any major problem. To carry this additional burden the Director of the Joint Staff should be given appropriate staff assistance, perhaps in the form of a Deputy Director or Assistant Director of the Joint Staff.

The development of the basis of facts on which decisions are made, and the preparation of both military advice from the Joint Chiefs of Staff and advice from other parts of the Office of the Secretary—such as budgetary advice from the Comptroller, scientific and technical advice from research and engineering experts—would greatly benefit by the exchange of ideas in the early stages of work on each major problem. Such interchange should not only help the staff work of the Joint Chiefs of Staff but should also make it possible for the Joint Chiefs to be of greater assistance to other parts of the Office of the Secretary of Defense—for example, by enabling the Secretary to bring to bear on an important budgetary decision relating to an important weapons system the points of view of all three services, instead of only that of the single service most immediately concerned.

(d) The Joint Strategic Survey Committee, as the senior advisory group to the Joint Chiefs of Staff in regard to overall strategy, should be strengthened for the all-important function of strategic planning.

Strategic planning for modern warfare requires not only military knowledge and experience, but a wide range of scientific information, a knowledge of fundamental cost factors, and similar technical information. For this and other reasons, the Joint Strategic Survey Committee, and the other committees and staff groups of the Joint Chiefs of Staff which are assigned duties in connection with strategic planning, should be strengthened.

FIRST BASEBALL—Lt. Gen. A. R. Boling (right), Commanding General, Third Army, gets ready to pitch the first ball at the first game at Ft. McPherson, Ga., to Lt. Col. W. H. McNaull, left, Post Commander. Ft. Mac beat Craig AFB, Ala., in the local military opener 23 April. The Ft. Mac team is undefeated and untied, having already played four out-of-town games.

The officers to be assigned to the Joint Strategic Survey Committee should be selected for their grasp of strategic problems, both with regard to overall strategy in its relation to international policy and with respect to the effect on strategy of the development of new weapons. They should be chosen, moreover, for their appreciation of the unified point of view of the Department of Defense and of the need for integration of the plans of the several services.

The Joint Strategic Survey Committee (a) should be reinforced with outstanding civilian scientists and perhaps representatives of other professions, (b) should be the agency to work out the integration of new weapons into established weapons systems, and (c) should make recommendations with respect to the use of completely new weapons systems in the plans for future war. Consideration should also be given to utilizing on this Committee from time to time the experience of some of our outstanding retired officers.

This Committee should be composed of members of such stature and prestige that they can be of the greatest possible assistance to the Joint Chiefs of Staff. When they report on a matter which they regard as of major importance, their views should be promptly transmitted by the Joint Chiefs to the Secretary of Defense, together with any comments which the Chiefs themselves might wish to add. The Secretary of Defense might also find it desirable to discuss important issues directly with this Committee as well as with the Joint Chiefs in order to get the benefit of their individual views.

This Committee, and the other committees and staff groups of the Joint Chiefs of Staff dealing with strategic planning, should work closely with the Assistant Secretaries of Defense (particularly those for Research and Development, Applications, Engineering, Supply and Logistics, International Security Affairs, and the Comptroller). These committees and groups should make maximum use of the various operations analyses and operations research agencies of the Department of Defense.

(e) With respect to each unified command, the Secretary of Defense should assign the executive responsibility for such command to a military department.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff, by memorandum from the Secretary of Defense, dated April 21 1948, commonly known as the Key West agreement, were assigned responsibility for designating one of their members as their executive agent for a unified command. This arrangement is undesirable in that it permits the assignment of important executive functions within the Department of Defense independently of the Secretary, confuses the lines of command and responsibility, and thereby weakens the traditional principle of civilian control. It also leads to the assignment to the individual military chiefs of certain administrative and other responsibilities which should be assigned by the Secretary of Defense to the individual Secretaries of the military departments. Moreover, it confuses the responsibility of the individual military chief of a service to the Secretary of his military department, when the military chief is operating as executive agent of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Therefore, the committee recommends that the Secretary of Defense, with the approval of the President, should revise the memorandum in question. This revision should provide that the Secretary of Defense, after a unified command is established and its mission defined, should designate a military department as the executive agency for that command. All orders transmitted to a unified command should specify that they are issued by direction of the Secretary of Defense. The Secretary of Defense, in designating a military department as an executive agency, should do so with an important proviso, to wit: That, for the strategic direction and operational control of forces and for the conduct of combat operations, the military chief of that department should be empowered to receive and transmit orders and to act for that department in its executive agency capacity. This arrangement will make it always possible to deal promptly with emergency or wartime situations. The Committee believes that an executive agency should consult as necessary on important matters affecting the unified command with the Secretaries or the military chiefs of the other services, either individually or sitting as Joint Chiefs. This arrangement does, however, leave responsibility clearly in the executive agency.

The Secretary of Defense should select an executive agency for a unified command only after receiving the advice of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as at present. He should also receive the advice of the Secretaries of the military departments and other appropriate civilian officers. In designating an executive agency, the Secretary is acting for the President as Commander in Chief and in accordance with the policies which the President has established with the advice of the National Security Council, and he may therefore need to consult the President or the heads of other departments in connection with the designation of an executive agency.

The Secretary of Defense, after approval by the President, should appoint the commanders in chief of unified commands. Any changes in the mission of a unified command should be effected by the same authority as its original assignment.

4. The Armed Forces Policy Council

The Secretary of Defense should use the Armed Forces Policy Council (augmented as he may desire) as his principal advisory group on major problems of policy in which he requires both civilian and military advice.

As the Secretaries of the military departments are the principal civilian advisers to the Secretary of Defense, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff are his principal military advisers, the Armed Forces Policy Council is the group in which the Secretary may obtain combined civilian and military advice on major problems.

This council is the principal consultative body created by the National Security Act to advise the Secretary of Defense on matters of broad policy relating to the Armed Forces. Its statutory membership includes the Secretary and Deputy Secretary of Defense, the Secretaries of the military departments, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the three military chiefs. It is the group to which the Secretary of Defense may normally turn on issues—for example, those which may arise in the National Security Council—on which he is not willing to rely exclusively on the advice of either the Joint Secretaries or the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The Committee emphasizes, however, that the Secretary of Defense should always be free to consult with any group which can be most useful to him. The Committee does not believe that the statutory language regarding the membership of the Armed Forces Policy Council should be interpreted so as to restrict the freedom of consultation of the Secretary of Defense, or that any traditions or customs should be permitted to develop which would hamper the Secretary in his flexible and informal relations with his subordinates.

5. Other Agencies in the Office of the Secretary of Defense

In order to attain the most efficient organization possible, to clarify the assignment of responsibilities, and to avoid duplication of effort, certain statutory agencies within the Department of Defense should be abolished and their functions transferred to the Secretary.

Such action, which should result in a considerable saving of personnel, will necessitate the creation of additional Assistant Secretary positions, to which the Secretary may assign the functions of the abolished agencies and other staff functions which may be required.

As a general principle, the Committee believes that boards and agencies should not be set up by statute in the Office of the Secretary of Defense, and that the Secretary of Defense should be left free to adjust from time to time the assignment of staff functions within his own office in a flexible and expeditious manner. It finds in particular that the board form of organization of the Munitions Board and the Research and Development Board is rigid and unwieldy. It recommends that these two Boards should be abolished and their functions transferred to the Secretary of Defense. It recommends, moreover, that the Congress should be requested to authorize the establishment of additional Assistant Secretary positions within his Office—3 to take the place of the 2 Boards (based on a redistribution of staff functions), 2 to replace individual officials who presently hold other titles, and 1 to be assigned to a position formerly filled by an Assistant Secretary. The Committee believes that with the recruitment of individual executives of appropriate stature to the Assistant Secretary positions, it will be possible to obtain better results with a substantial reduction in the total number of employees.

The three present Assistant Secretaries of Defense deal with the following fields:

- (1) Assistant Secretary (Comptroller).
- (2) Assistant Secretary (International Security Affairs).
- (3) Assistant Secretary (Manpower and Personnel).

The Committee believes that these three Assistant Secretary positions should be retained. It believes that it is desirable for the Secretary to have the flexibility now given him by law (except in the case of the Comptroller) to assign to these officials such functions and duties as he may choose, and that the same principle should be followed in setting up additional Assistant Secretary positions.

The Committee recommends that the Secretary should consider assigning to other Assistant Secretaries functions as noted below. The Committee also suggests below that certain other staff functions may be discharged by officers with other titles, but it has not endeavored to make detailed recommendations to the Secretary of Defense regarding the complete organization of his office.

The various Assistant Secretaries should function as staff heads within their respective fields, in addition to carrying out such special duties and responsibilities as may be assigned to them from time to time by the Secretary. They should not be in the direct line of administrative authority between him and the three military departments, but instead should assist in developing policies, prescribing standards, and bringing to the Secretary of Defense information on which he may base his decisions.

One of the greatest problems in administering the Department of Defense comes from the difficulty of obtaining complete, accurate, and understandable information on which to base decisions. A conspicuous example is the lack of adequate inventory and accounting systems in the military departments. Studies initiated last year seeking a solution to this problem should be vigorously pursued. The Assistant Secretaries of Defense have important responsibilities in their respective fields to help the Secretary develop more adequate systems for bringing information to him in a form which can serve as an adequate basis of policy and operating decisions.

In addition, each of the Assistant Secretaries should be responsible for helping the Secretary of Defense to carry on a continuous examination and audit of the effectiveness and efficiency with which policies and programs are being carried out in their particular fields. Policies cannot be reviewed entirely on paper at headquarters. Only by visits to bases, camps, and other physical installations can representatives of the Office of the Secretary of Defense keep the Secretary thoroughly informed on the actual results of the program for which he is responsible.

(a) Assistant Secretary (Research and Development)

The Research and Development Board, established by the National Security Act, was given the responsibility for preparing a complete and integrated program of research and development for military purposes, and for advising the Joint Chiefs of Staff regarding the trends in scientific research relating to national security and regarding the interaction of research and development and strategy. The Board has been handicapped in carrying out its functions by the rigidity of its membership and the complicated administrative mechanism inherent in the board-type structure.

The Committee recommends the dissolution of the Board, the transfer of its functions to the Secretary of Defense, and the appointment of an Assistant Secretary (Research and Development) to whom the Secretary may assign such of the functions of the present Board as he may determine. These steps should make it possible to establish a more flexible organization and, by developing a more selective and integrated program of research in those fields that can contribute most to the security of the Nation, should effect considerable savings and accomplish more effective results.

In making this change, the Secretary of Defense should not sacrifice such parts of the present functions of the Research and Development Board as are now operating satisfactorily.

(b) Assistant Secretary (Applications Engineering)

This official should perform such duties as the Secretary may assign to him in the broad field which lies between research and development, on the one hand, and the quantity production of weapons, on the other.

He should examine into and make recommendations concerning new developments as to their suitability for the purposes intended; their reliability, simplicity, and economy of production, especially with respect to their suitability for production by existing machine tools and other facilities; and their ability to fit into a complete weapons system. Some of these functions have been within the scope of the Research and Development Board.

He should also be assigned certain functions which have been within the scope of the Munitions Board, such as engineering policies and standardization problems.

This Assistant Secretary would not relieve the services of their responsibility for taking initiative in the development or use of new weapons. Instead, he should work closely with the responsible officers of the three services who are concerned with such problems, to point out unnecessary duplication and obsolete programs that can be eliminated, to check on the progress being made, and to assist the Secretary of Defense in evaluating such programs in the broad interest of national security. He should also consult with the Joint Strategic Survey Committee.

It is desirable for the Weapons Systems Evaluation Group to be made responsible, for administrative purpose, to the Secretary of Defense through the Assistant Secretary (Applications Engineering). Its primary duty should be to respond to calls for service and assistance from the Joint Chiefs of Staff or from the Secretary of Defense.

In addition to the military members, this Group should include a small staff of outstanding scientists and engineers to make studies of our present and future weapons systems and those of other countries, their relations to strategy and tactics, and their comparative effectiveness and cost. It would rely for a great part of its data on the studies prepared in the operations research and operations evaluation groups attached to the three military departments. At the same time the Weapons Systems Evaluation Group should be enabled to make use of the contract method to obtain operations research studies from outside the Government, as the three military departments now do. The Weapons Systems Evaluation Group should be at least as strong an organization as the operations research agencies now maintained by contract by the three military departments.

The Assistant Secretary (Applications Engineering), working with the assistance of this Group, should attempt to establish the greatest standardization of weapons consistent with the prompt introduction of advanced weapons and techniques.

(c) Assistant Secretary (Supply and Logistics)

This official should have responsibility for the formulation of overall policy and for the supervision and review of programs in the fields of procurement, production planning, distribution, transportation, stockpiling, and warehousing.

He should take over, by delegation from the Secretary, such of the functions presently performed by the Munitions Board as the Secretary may assign, for example:

- (1) Appraising the feasibility of Joint Chiefs of Staff plans in terms of the availability of materials, end items, components, and supporting services.
- (2) Developing systems for production programming, production scheduling, and expediting.
- (3) Developing recommendations on requirements for strategic materials that should be stockpiled to meet military needs.
- (4) Developing policies and programs for the maintenance of industrial facilities required for the production of military end items and components in the event of mobilization.

The change from the board-type operation should make possible considerable savings in the numbers of personnel required to do the job and should effect even greater dollar savings through more effective inventory and stock control and improved accountability for equipment and supplies.

The Defense Supply Management Agency should be abolished and its functions transferred to the Secretary of Defense. The Secretary may wish to delegate them to the Assistant Secretary (Supply and Logistics).

As part of the general review of the organization of the military departments, recommended above, the Secretary of Defense should direct the Secretaries of the military departments to undertake the reorganization of those parts of the various services concerned with procurement, production, distribution, and supply matters. If, in order to carry through such reorganization, further statutory authority is required, the committee recommends that it be requested.

The Secretary may wish to consider placing the Military Traffic Service under the supervision of the Assistant Secretary (Supply and Logistics).

(d) Assistant Secretary (Properties and Installations)

In view of the size and importance of the facilities, installations, properties, and public-works programs of the Department of Defense, it is the committee's opinion that the statutory position of Director of Installations should be abolished, and the Secretary should assign such of its duties as he may deem appropriate to an Assistant Secretary (Properties and Installations). Such an Assistant Secretary would be responsible, for example, for reviewing the plans and construction of all public-works projects; maintaining a complete inventory of facilities and their utilization; developing policies and procedures on public-works requirements; and developing uniform design criteria and construction standards.

This Assistant Secretary should also undertake such duties as the Secretary of Defense may specify in connection with the physical maintenance of Government owned and operated facilities. He should be responsible for the review of idle properties and their use or possible disposition. He should supervise the Armed Forces Housing Agency and he should cooperate closely with the Assistant Secretary (Supply and Logistics) on policies on standby facilities when such facilities are owned by the Government.

(e) Assistant Secretary (Legislative Affairs)

Until recently, an Assistant Secretary was assigned to deal with legislative and legal affairs. In view of the increased importance of international security affairs and in view of the fact that only three Assistant Secretary positions were available, this assistant secretary position was assigned to international security affairs. In the opinion of the Committee, the importance of defense legislation to the national security and economy fully justifies the assignment of the legislative affairs function to an Assistant Secretary of Defense.

This official should be responsible for the effective coordination of the legislative recommendations originating in the military departments before submission to Congress. These recommendations cover a wide variety of programs and, in support of the effort to achieve maximum security at minimum cost, it is essential that they be as closely coordinated as possible. In addition, the Congress and its committees require information on defense matters promptly in order to carry out their responsibilities. The Secretary may wish to assign to this official other duties in related areas.

(f) Assistant Secretary (Health and Medical)

The Armed Forces Medical Policy Council has recently been abolished and its place has been taken by a special assistant to the Secretary. In view of the recognized importance of maintaining high health standards among the personnel of the Armed Forces, and of providing and managing hospitals and other medical installations at the smallest possible cost in dollars and professional personnel, an Assistant Secretary position is justified and necessary, in the opinion of the Committee, to provide adequate staff assistance in this field to the Secretary.

This Assistant Secretary should be charged particularly with making studies and recommendations leading toward the development of a more unified system of hospitals and training programs for military medical personnel, especially in the zone of the interior. As several previous studies have pointed out, considerable economies are possible in this area.

(g) General Counsel

The legal work of the Secretary of Defense should be carried on by an office under the direction of a General Counsel of the Department of Defense, who should have a rank substantially equivalent to that of an Assistant Secretary. Authoritative legal opinions and interpretations, when approved by the Secretary of Defense, should be followed throughout the entire Department. It is particularly important that the Office of the General Counsel should set up close liaison relations with the chief legal officers in the three military departments, so that the legal work of the entire Department of Defense may be supervised and coordinated effectively. Such coordination is particularly necessary in order to eliminate and prevent confusion which has been caused within the Department of Defense and in industry by inconsistent opinions, interpretations, and approaches in various departments and agencies in the Department of Defense.

(h) Military Liaison Committee (atomic energy)

The significance of atomic energy to the development of military strategy and weapons systems can hardly be overstated. The determination of requirements and specifications for atomic weapons is an important key to the security of the United States and to the development of future roles and missions of the three services.

The Atomic Energy Act of 1946, as amended in 1949, established the position of the Chairman of the Military Liaison Committee within the Department of Defense and outlined the statutory duties of the Committee. The position of Chairman has developed in practice a somewhat broader function. The Committee believes that the Secretary should continue to use this position to provide him with a principal staff assistant to help him review the general policies of the military departments with respect to atomic energy, and to keep him informed of all aspects of atomic energy development and uses. In addition, the Chairman might

Army Reenlistments Increase, Officials Consider Stabilized ZI Tour Proposal

Army reenlistments, which had hit a slump causing serious concern over heavy attrition of skilled noncommissioned officers, are showing a definite upward trend.

Officials are hopeful that plans now under discussion will provide added impetus to the concerted re-up drive, aimed at conserving manpower, time and dollars and adding up to increased combat efficiency.

Latest statistics disclose that reenlistments have gone up about 25 per cent over the rate during the latter part of 1952 and the early weeks of 1953.

Undoubtedly, the gratifying increase in enlisted promotions is related closely to the removal of arbitrary ceilings imposed upon the Army's enlisted grade structure and the restoration of the 20-year retirement privilege for enlisted personnel.

Throughout the world, Army commanders from top to bottom are giving energetic attention to the problem of keeping non-coms in service at the expiration of their tours.

Now under consideration is a proposal which its advocates believe would probably do as much as any other single action to spur reenlistments.

An effort is being made to formulate a plan which would assure enlisted personnel returning from overseas of a stabilized tour in the U. S., probably of at least 18 months.

Defense officials long have recognized that a primary deterrent to reenlistment is the widespread feeling among enlisted men that the frequency of overseas duty and the lack of adequate housing, both in the U. S. and abroad, prevent a normal family life.

The hope is to assure enlisted men of at least a year and a half, possibly even two years, in the U. S. after their return from duty overseas.

At the present time, a man coming back from Korea can count on nine months in the States before becoming eligible for overseas duty. An enlisted man returning to the ZI from elsewhere can count on only six months.

The chances for the adoption of the stabilized tour plan will depend on the over-all manpower picture in the Army and particularly on the combat demands in Korea, which must receive priority attention.

Meantime, with the receipt from commanders in the U. S. and overseas of reports on the effects on morale of recent action to boost the career opportunities and benefits of non-coms, Army authorities are hopeful that the recent upward swing in the re-up rate will continue.

Army Slates 99,500 EM NCO Promotions For May

The Army late this week released enlisted promotion quotas for May which will permit a total of 99,500 boosts to corporal and above.

This is an increase of 17,000 over the April quotas.

During May, the Army will promote 500 to master sergeant, 4000 to sergeant first class, 25,000 to sergeant and 70,000 to corporal.

For comparison, the April limitations for these ranks were, respectively, 1000, 4500, 25,000 and 55,000.

This means that there will be 500 fewer promotions to each of the top two grades, but 3000 more to sergeant and 15,000 additional advancements to corporal.

Career Study Ordered

quiry into such factors as promotions, pay, housing, dependent care, survivor benefits, recreational facilities, etc., as a result of the President's order.

The President's statement was made following his receipt of the Rockefeller Commission report which concludes with the following two paragraphs:

"This Committee believes that the organization and procedures recommended in this report will neither operate to best advantage nor produce effectiveness and economy unless the Department continues to be staffed with competent men and women, military and civilian, especially selected and trained for their important duties.

"We feel," said Mr. Nelson Rockefeller and his associates, "that the problem of attracting and holding career personnel needs restudy and prompt action. While the assignment of this Committee was limited to the organization and procedures of the Department of Defense, it was, on several occasions, brought to our attention that the inducements and rewards of the civilian and military career services may not have kept pace with the attractions of private enterprise. In the opinion of this Committee, this other phase of the administrative problem cannot be overemphasized."

In addition to Mr. Rockefeller, the members of the Committee were General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the JCS; Dr. Vannevar Bush, president of Carnegie Institution; Dr. Milton Eisenhower, president of Penn State College; Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, Defense Mobilizer; Robert A. Lovett, former Secretary of Defense; and Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, USAR, chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America.

General Bradley, as he is coming to the close of his active career, is known to be pressing hard for action to increase the benefits and prestige of a military career.

Meantime, it was learned that Admiral Womble is expected to meet next week with his committee members to review data compiled by a subcommittee of officers below general officer and flag rank.

Serving with Admiral Womble, who incidentally was executive staff director of the Strauss Commission on Incentive Pay which expressed concern over decreased attractiveness of a military career, are Maj. Gen. Robert N. Young, Army G-1; Rear Adm. J. F. Bolger, Deputy Chief of Naval Personnel; Maj. Gen. Morris J. Lee, Air Force Director of Personnel Planning; and Brig. Gen. Nels H. Nelson, Marine Corps G-1.

There were reports this week that the ad hoc committee might spend several months in its work, but with the publicly disclosed Presidential interest, a speed-up is possible.

Pertinent to the President's statement about "the problems of attracting and holding competent career personnel" is the fact that at no time since his Inauguration has the Chief Executive commented on the proposal by the former Administration for an 8 per cent increase in the base pay of all military pay.

The Strauss Commission, it is recalled, recommended that military pay be tied to the cost of living index. Such action would result in an increase of about 8 per cent in base pay.

The chairman of the Incentive Pay Commission, Rear Adm. Lewis L. Strauss, USNR, inactive, is now White House advisor on atomic energy matters.

ROA Urges Changes In Reserve Set-Up

The Armed Forces Reserve Policy Board this week heard a presentation by Col. Charles M. Boyer, executive director, Reserve Officers Association, in which he called for appointment of an Assistant Secretary for Reserves, in the Defense Department and in each of the three Services and designation of a Deputy Chief of Staff for Reserve affairs in the Army, Navy (DCNO) and Air Force.

The ROA plan reportedly had been made known to President Eisenhower before its public disclosure.

The Reserve Policy Board met at the Pentagon this week under its new chairman, Dr. Arthur S. Adams, a U. S. Naval Academy graduate (Class of '18) who saw active service during WWII as a Navy captain and who is now president of the American Council of Education.

The most controversial item on the agenda was the statement made by Colonel Boyer. Observers noted that he accompanied his presentation—text here—with a chart that was made at the Pentagon on 20 April.

Here is the text of Colonel Boyer's statement to the Board:

"At the National Council meeting of the ROA on 28 Feb.-1 March 1953, the following resolution was adopted:

"RESOLVED, That there be named in each of the three Services and in the Department of Defense an Assistant Secretary for Reserves whose exclusive duties will be the operation, control, and management of the reserve components of the respective Service and the proper administration and operation of reserve policy at the Defense Department level.

"Before discussing this resolution, I would like to state that our views as expressed here today are not expressed as criticism but are given to you as what we think are constructive ideas which, if approved by your Committee and approved by the Secretary of Defense, will give us a better reserve than we have at the present time.

"The Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1952 and the Committee Reports clearly indicate a mandate from the Congress that reserve affairs be given special attention as a special mission of the Armed Forces in planning for and executing war scale or partial mobilization. It is true that an Assistant Secretary of Defense, as well as an Assistant Secretary of each of the Services have, in addition to their other duties, assigned to them the reserve forces. Unfortunately, the other duties assigned to the Assistant Secretaries are so numerous that the amount of time these Assistant Secretaries can give to the reserves is limited.

Different Interpretations

"It would appear that at the present time the Assistant Secretaries do not exercise operational control of the reserves. We find, in many instances, policies are adopted at the Defense level and different interpretations are placed on the policies by the various Services. We also find that policies are adopted at the Service level and, in many instances, the interpretations by the Commanders in the field are different in each Area.

"Should we become involved in World War III the time element which has been in our favor in the past will no longer be with us. It is necessary that insofar as possible we have our reserves trained, equipped, and ready at the earliest possible moment. Our total reserve strength at the present time is approximately equal to the total strength of our presently expanded Services. As the product of UMST becomes available for service in the reserves, it is only a question of a few years until the reserve forces on inactive duty will be a much larger force than our regular services.

Serve In Dual Capacity

"It must be recognized that the problems facing the reserves are different from the problems facing the regular services. Our reservists serve in a dual capacity. Their primary job is earning their living as civilians and at the same time they must remain prepared to assume their duties in the active forces when needed. At the present time, it appears to us that the planning of the various Services deals with the product that will be available when called to duty, overlooking the various problems confronting these reservists while engaged in their civilian pursuits. This being true, an Assistant Secretary with a Deputy Chief of Staff for each of the Services, charged with the full responsibility of looking after the reserves at their primary job, will assure the reserves that their interests are being considered at the highest echelon and we believe will enhance the security of our country.

"At the present time, the reserve program

Gen. Sarnoff Honored by Radio & TV Association

Television should be no place for "get-rich-quick Wallingfords more interested in what they can take than what they can give," said Brig. Gen. David Sarnoff, USAR-Ret., Chairman of the Board, Radio Corporation of America, in the keynote address at the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters Convention in Los Angeles 29 April.

General Sarnoff, who also is Chairman of the Board of the National Broadcasting Company, received the First Annual Keynote Award of the NARTB, which cited him as a pioneer in broadcasting "whose vision, industry, leadership and faith are essential components of the free American system of broadcasting . . . for his good citizenship in the quiet hours and in the hours of strife . . . for the steadfastness which has marked his achievements in modern times . . . and because he has shared his great dream of communications with the millions whom we serve."

Television, like radio, must be based on a solid foundation of service to the American people, General Sarnoff said. The Wallingfords, he declared, "may ride high for a time, but they will have no staying power. Sooner or later the public will intervene and they will lose out to broadcasters who have shouldered the responsibilities on which continuing opportunities for profits are founded. Television, like radio, should be a profession, with all that the term at its best implies in integrity, dignity, and above all, dedication to a tradition of public usefulness."

flows through the staffs of the various Services. We fully realize that the staffs of each of the Services are confronted with problems of such global and immediate importance that consideration of reserve problems must be relegated to a subordinate status. It is the view of the Reserve Officers Association that there is little, if any, operational control exercised by the Assistant Secretaries over this program. As stated before, most of these Assistant Secretaries have so many complex and demanding duties that there is simply insufficient time to assume operational control. We believe that there might be a considerable saving in manpower by concentrating the planning and operational control in an Assistant Secretary and a Deputy Chief of Staff for reserve matters.

Recommendations Cited

"We would recommend that in the Department of the Army there be created,

"(1.) The Office of Deputy Chief of Staff for Reserve Components. At the present time we have a Special Adviser to the Chief of Staff for Reserve Affairs. This office would be discontinued and the work being done by this office would be taken over by the Deputy Chief of Staff for Reserve Components.

"(2.) Attach, for operational functioning, the staff members of the General Staff Committee on National Guard and Reserve policy to the Office of Deputy Chief of Staff for Reserve Components.

"(3.) Transfer the functions of Special Policy for Reserve Components, now in the General Staff, to the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Reserve Components.

"(4.) Transfer the operational and administrative functions, now carried out therein from the General Staff to the Office of the Executive for Reserve and ROTC Affairs and the National Guard Bureau, as appropriate.

"(5.) Retain on the General Staff those functions that integrate Reserve Component affairs with the active Army.

"(6.) Define the ROTC as an officer procurement program of the Army Reserve and include it in the mission of the Office of Executive for Reserve and ROTC Affairs for supervision.

"(7.) Place the National Guard Bureau and the Office of the Executive for Reserve and ROTC Affairs under policy control of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Reserve Components.

"The organization within the Continental United States Armies would follow a pattern somewhat as follows:

"(1.) A Deputy Army Commander for Reserve Components who will deal directly with Army Staff sections handling solely reserve component affairs and Chiefs of Military District.

"(2.) Require two Special Staff Sections in Army Headquarters:

"(a) National Guard Section; and

"(b) Army Reserve and ROTC Section.

Guided Missile Research To Help Future Industry

Rockets and guided missile research and development will have wide effect on industry and business in the future, Lawrence A. Hyland, vice president in charge of engineering for Bendix Aviation Corp., predicted in a special statement this week.

According to Mr. Hyland, three examples of how industry has already benefited include the designing of faster, stronger and more precise automatic controls and automatic machine tools; research on upper air phenomena which enables more accurate weather forecasting; and a special Bendix automotive product, not yet announced or placed on the market, which involved a design problem that went unsolved until guided missile know-how was applied to it.

A great deal of the information derived from guided missile combustion research work, the Bendix official disclosed, will be directly applicable to piston engines as well as coal and oil furnaces.

Mr. Hyland is a member of the Guided Missiles Committee of the U.S. Research and Development Board.

Sales for these two periods were approximately the same. Net income, however, showed a substantial improvement this year and was equivalent to $.82 per share on 2,134,312 shares outstanding, compared with a loss last year of $.59 per share on 1,134,229 shares then outstanding.

"(3.) Set up two Special Staff Sections in Military District Headquarters:

"(a) National Guard Section; and

"(b) Army Reserve and ROTC Section.

"(4.) Charge the Chief Military District with personal supervision over public relations and information.

"Other features that would contribute to the objective stated herein are:

"(1.) Elimination of Army Field Forces for direct responsibility in reserve affairs.

"The Reserve Officers Association respectfully requests that your Committee consider a recommendation to the Secretary of Defense that legislation be sought to provide for an additional Assistant Secretary of Defense, as well as Assistant Secretaries for each of the Services, whose primary responsibility will be the planning and operational control of the reserve components of the respective Service and further recommend that this legislation also provide for a Deputy Chief of Staff for the Army, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for the Navy, and a Deputy Chief of Staff for the Air Force."

Garand, Rifle Inventor, Retires After 34 Years

John C. Garand, inventor of the famed Army M1 rifle, retired this week from the Ordnance Corps' Springfield Armory after 34 years of civilian service with the Army.

Over four million .30 calibre M1 rifles have been manufactured since the Army adopted the design in 1936. And over 85 per cent of them have been turned out at the Springfield Armory.

In a brief ceremony congratulating Mr. Garand on his "contributions to the science of small arms design and development," Maj. Gen. Emerson L. Cummings, Chief of the Industrial Division, Office of Chief of Ordnance, presented him with the one-millionth Garand rifle.

A citation from Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens, read by General Cummings, declared that Mr. Garand's contributions "in the field of weapon design have been accompanied by an outstanding record of design of machine tools not only for the manufacture of the M1 rifle but for tools required in the production of other weapons."

Mr. Garand started to work in the Springfield Armory in 1919 after a short tenure of employment with the Bureau of Standards.

his proposal for reorganization of the Defense Department.

Mr. Eisenhower said that he had the benefit of the report prepared by the Rockefeller Commission on Defense Department Organization. It is known that Mr. Wilson had a copy of this report before he left for Europe last month.

The President's plan essentially would abolish the Munitions Board, Research and Development Board, the Defense Supply Management Agency and the Director of Installations.

Mr. Wilson at his first press conference had called the Munitions Board a "fifth wheel."

To the three present Assistant Secretaries of Defense (Comptroller, International Affairs and Manpower and Personnel), the President would add as many as six new Assistant Secretaries.

The General Counsel of the Defense Department would be "the chief legal officer" and would receive pay comparable to that prescribed for assistant secretaries of executive departments.

There has been no secret to the fact that during the last several years the legal activities of the Defense Department, notably in the legislative field, have not been outstanding.

It has been rumored that Mr. H. Struve Hensel, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and presently a special legal advisor to Mr. Wilson, might be named for the post of General Counsel.

The President's reorganization plan would strengthen the Chairman of the JCS by transferring to him the functions of the Joint Chiefs with respect to managing the Joint Staff and the Director of the Joint Staff.

The latter would be selected by the JCS and his selection and tenure would be subject to the approval of the Secretary of Defense.

be given the duty of reviewing the programs of the Armed Forces special weapons project.

The Chairman of the Military Liaison Committee, besides maintaining close liaison with the Atomic Energy Commission, should work closely with the proposed Assistant Secretaries for Research and Development, Applications Engineering, and Supply and Logistics.

6. Personnel

The effective functioning of the Office of the Secretary of Defense requires that the military departments make highly qualified officers available for duty in this Office and that proper performance of such duty as judged by the Secretary of Defense, will be beneficial to the future career of these officers in their own services.

The Office of the Secretary of Defense necessarily depends to a considerable extent for its staff on the assignment of officers from the military services. It is of the utmost importance that these officers in serving the Secretary in the broad interest of national defense do not lose standing in their respective services through a lack of appreciation of the importance of this assignment or of the accomplishments of the individual officer while on such duty. At the present time, many officers feel that assignment in the Office of the Secretary of Defense isolates them from their service and deprives them of an equal opportunity for promotion with other officers of the same age and rank.

This attitude is reinforced by various procedural handicaps that are placed on the submission of efficiency reports by civilian supervisors. It is the present policy of the Office of the Secretary of Defense that only military officers may execute an officer's formal efficiency report, and that civilian supervisors submit reports in letter form on officers who serve under them. This is not believed to be sound practice. Such letters often fail to receive equal consideration with reports submitted in the usual form by military officers.

The present system of promotion by selection boards has been proved sound. One of the duties of the Secretaries of the military departments is to see that the selection boards are established and operate on a high plane of competence. It is important to seek a solution to the problems noted above without damage to the present professional and nonpolitical system for promoting officers in the military services.

In the opinion of the Committee, the Secretary of Defense should:

(a) Receive the full cooperation of the military departments in assigning highly qualified officers to the various agencies working for the Secretary of Defense, and in assuring these officers that such assignment may boards convened in his department for the selection of military officers for promotion, to give the same weight to service in the Office of the Secretary of Defense and the efficiency reports from that Office as to service in the military department staff and to efficiency reports of departmental officers. These actions are desirable in order to reward military officers equally for service on behalf of the Department of Defense and service on the staff of a military department.

These actions and others which will be undertaken are aimed at a more effective and efficient Department of Defense; indeed, actions toward this objective will be continuous.

The impact of all these measures will be felt through the whole structure of the Department of Defense, its utilization of millions of personnel and billions of dollars. A simple token testimony to this is this fact: in the Office of the Secretary of Defense alone a staff reduction of approximately 500 persons will be effected.

III

Our third broad objective is to improve our machinery for strategic planning for national security. Certain actions toward this end may be taken administratively to improve the organization and procedures within the Department of Defense. Other changes are incorporated in the reorganization plan transmitted to the Congress today.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff, as provided in the National Security Act of 1947, are not a command body but are the principal military advisors to the President, the National Security Council, and the Secretary of Defense. They are responsible for formulating the strategic plans by which the United States will cope with the challenge of any enemy. The three members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff who are the military chiefs of their respective services are responsible to their Secretaries for the efficiency of their services and their readiness for war.

These officers are clearly overworked, and steps must be devised to relieve them of time-consuming details of minor importance. They must be encouraged to delegate lesser duties to reliable subordinate individuals and agencies in both the Joint Chiefs of Staff structure and in their military department staffs. One of our aims in making more effective our strategic planning machinery, therefore, is to improve the organization and procedures of the supporting staff of the Joint Chiefs of Staff so that the Chiefs, acting as a body, will be better able to perform their roles as strategic planners and military advisors.

Our military plans are based primarily on military factors, but they must also take into account a wider range of policy and economic factors, as well as the latest developments of modern science. Therefore, our second aim in assuring the very best strategic planning is to broaden the degree of active participation of other persons and units at the staff level in the consideration of matters before the Joint Chiefs of Staff and to bring to bear more diversified and expert skills.

The reorganization plan transmitted to the Congress today is designed—without detracting from the military advisory functions of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as a group—to place upon the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff greater responsibility for organizing and directing the subordinate structure of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in such a way as to help the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff discharge their total responsibilities.

Specifically, the reorganization plan makes the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff responsible for managing the work of the Joint Staff and its Director. The Joint Staff is, of course, a study-and-reporting body serving the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The plan makes the service of the Director of the Joint Staff subject to the approval of the Secretary of Defense. It also makes the service of officers on the Joint Staff subject to the approval of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. These new responsibilities of the Chairman are in consonance with his present functions of serving as the presiding officer of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, providing agenda for meetings, assisting the Joint Chiefs of Staff to perform their duties as promptly as practicable, and keeping the Secretary of Defense and the President informed of issues before the Joint Chiefs of Staff. In addition, the proposed changes will relieve the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as a body, of a large amount of administrative detail involved in the management of its subordinate committee and staff structure.

In support of our second aim—broadened participation in strategic planning—the Secretary of Defense will direct the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to arrange for the fullest cooperation of the Joint Staff and the subcommittees of the Joint Chiefs of Staff with other parts of the Office of the Secretary of Defense in the early stages of staff work on any major problem. If necessary, to aid in this additional burden, an Assistant or Deputy Director of the Joint Staff will be designated to give particular attention to this staff collaboration. Thus, at the developmental stages of important staff studies by the subordinate elements of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, there will be a proper integration of the views and special skills of the other staff agencies of the Department, such as those responsible for budget, manpower, supply, research, and engineering. This action will assure the presentation of improved staff products to the Joint Chiefs of Staff for their consideration.

Also, special attention will be given to providing for the participation of competent civilian scientists and engineers within the substructure of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Such participants will be able to contribute a wide range of scientific information and knowledge to our strategic planning.

Only by including outstanding civilian experts in the process of strategic planning can our military services bring new weapons rapidly into their established weapons systems, make recommendations with respect to the use of new systems of weapons in the future war plans, and see that the whole range of scientific information and knowledge of fundamental cost factors are taken into account in strategic planning.

Taken together, the changes included in the reorganization plan and the several administrative actions should go a long way toward improving the strategic planning machinery of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and lead to the development of plans based on the broadest conception of the over-all national Interest rather than the particular desires of the individual services.

I transmit herewith Reorganization Plan No. 6 of 1953, prepared in accordance with the Reorganization Act of 1949, as amended, and providing for reorganizations in the Department of Defense.

After investigation I have found and hereby declare that each reorganization included in Reorganization Plan No. 6 of 1953 is necessary to accomplish one or more of the purposes set forth in section 2 (a) of the Reorganization Act of 1949, as amended.

I have found and hereby declare that it is necessary to include in the accompanying reorganization plan, by reason of reorganizations made thereby, provisions for the appointment and compensation of six additional Assistant Secretaries of Defense and a General Counsel of the Department of Defense. The rates of compensation fixed for these officers are those which I have found to prevail in respect of comparable officers in the executive branch of the Government.

The statutory authority for the exercise of the function of guidance to the Munitions Board in connection with strategic and logistic plans, abolished by section 2 (d) of the reorganization plan, is section 213 (c) of the National Security Act of 1947, as amended.

The taking effect of the reorganizations included in Reorganization Plan No. 6 of 1953 is expected to result in a more effective, efficient, and economical performance of functions in the Department of Defense. It is impracticable to specify or itemize at this time the reduction of expenditures which it is probable will be brought about by such taking effect.

The Congress is a full partner in actions to strengthen our military establishment. Jointly we must carry forward a sound program to keep America strong. The Congress and the President, acting in their proper spheres, must perform their duties to the American people in support of our highest traditions. Should, for any reason, the national military policy become a subject of partisan politics, the only loser would be the American people.

We owe it to all the people to maintain the best military establishment that we know how to devise. There are none, however, to whom we owe it more than the soldiers, the sailors, the marines, and the airmen in uniform whose lives are pledged to the defense of our freedom.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER
THE WHITE HOUSE,
April 30, 1953.

Prepared by the President and transmitted to the Senate and the House of Representatives in Congress assembled, 30 April 1953, pursuant to the provisions of the Reorganization Act of 1949, approved 20 June 1949, as amended.

Department Of Defense

Section 1. Transfers of functions.—(a) All functions of the Munitions Board, the Research and Development Board, the Defense Supply Management Agency and the Director of Installations are hereby transferred to the Secretary of Defense.

(b) The selection of the Director of the Joint Staff by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and his tenure, shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of Defense.

(c) The selection of the members of the Joint Staff by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and their tenure, shall be subject to the approval of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

(d) The functions of the Joint Chiefs of Staff with respect to managing the Joint Staff and the Director thereof are hereby transferred to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Section 2. Abolition of agencies and functions.—(a) There are hereby abolished the Munitions Board, the Research and Development Board, and the Defense Supply Management Agency.

(b) The offices of Chairman of the Munitions Board, Chairman of the Research and Development Board, Director of the Defense Supply Management Agency, Deputy Director of the Defense Supply Management Agency and Director of Installations are hereby abolished.

(c) The Secretary of Defense shall provide for winding up any outstanding affairs of the said abolished agency, boards, and offices, not otherwise provided for in this reorganization plan.

(d) The function of guidance to the Munitions Board in connection with strategic and logistic plans as required by section 213(c) of the National Security Act of 1947, as amended, is hereby abolished.

Section 3. Assistant Secretaries of Defense.—Six additional Assistant Secretaries of Defense may be appointed from civilian life by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Each such Assistant Secretary shall perform such functions as the Secretary of Defense may from time to time prescribe and each shall receive compensation at the rate prescribed by law for assistant secretaries of executive departments.

Section 4. General Counsel.—The President may appoint from civilian life, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a General Counsel of the Department of Defense who shall be the chief legal officer of the Department, and who shall perform such functions as the Secretary of Defense may from time to time prescribe. He shall receive compensation at the rate prescribed by law

President Tells Framework For Defense Program Aimed At Long-Range Need

HERE is the text of President Eisenhower's prepared press conference statement of 30 April in which he outlined the Administration's plan for a long-range defense build-up. The Chief Executive said the program is not tied "to any magic, critical year," but instead "will be based on the sounder theory that a very real danger not only exists this year, but may continue to exist for years to come."

The President added that "our strength, which is already very real, must now be made stronger, not by inefficient and expensive starts and stops, but by steady continuous improvement."

The text:

"I would like to present to you in a general way, and with fairly broad strokes, what I consider the sensible framework within which the United States and its allies can present in hard military fact an ever more effective posture of defense. A true posture of defense is composed of three factors—spiritual, military, and economic. Today, I shall talk about the last two.

"We Americans have frequently called for unity of basic purpose among our allies. I feel quite strongly that the least we can do is to display a similar unity and continuity in American purpose.

"This policy of ours, therefore, will not be tied to any magic, critical year which then has to be 'stretched out' because of economic or production problems, but will be based on the sounder theory that a very real danger not only exists this year, but may continue to exist for years to come; that our strength, which is already very real, must now be made stronger, not by inefficient and expensive starts and stops, but by steady continuous improvement.

Logic In Military Affairs

"I have always firmly believed that there is a great logic in the conduct of military affairs. There is an equally great logic in economic affairs. If these two logical disciplines can be wedded, it is then possible to create a situation of maximum military strength within economic capacities.

"If, on the other hand, these two are allowed to proceed in disregard one for the other, you then create a situation either of doubtful military strength, or of such precarious economic strength that your military position is in constant jeopardy.

"It has been the purpose of this Administration ever since it took office, finding itself confronted with a crazy quilt of promises, commitments, and contracts, to bring American military logic and American economic logic into joint strong harness.

for assistant secretaries of executive departments.

Section 5. Including any function transferred to the Secretary by the provisions of this reorganization plan.

Section 6. Miscellaneous provisions.—(a) The Secretary of Defense may from time to time effect such transfers within the Department of Defense of any of the records, property, and personnel affected by this reorganization plan, and such transfers of unexpended balances (available or to be made available for use in connection with any affected function or agency) of appropriations, allocations, and other funds of such Department, as he deems necessary to carry out the provisions of this reorganization plan.

(b) Nothing herein shall affect the compensation of the Chairman of the Military Liaison Committee (63 Stat. 762).

afford an opportunity for an important advance in their careers.

(b) Authorize civilian officials, by whatever changes in directives may be required, to fill out formal efficiency reports for military personnel, and require that no other reports be filed on these officers for the period they have served full-time in the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

(c) Instruct the Secretaries of the military departments to direct their selection boards to give the same weight to service in the Office of the Secretary of Defense and the efficiency reports from that Office, as to service in the military department staff and to efficiency reports by departmental officers. In the light of the relationship of the military services to the Department of Defense as established by the National Security Act, the form of the oath taken by members of selection boards should be amended to see that "No more glaring illustration of the lack of balance between the military logic and the economic logic could possibly be found than the situation that existed when we took office. On the one hand, we found our allies deploring our unfulfilled defense promises. On the other hand, we found there was a total carry-over of $81-billion in appropriated funds, largely committed, for which cash must be provided from revenues in future fiscal years, over and above the normal annual cost of government. It's just as if the late Administration had gone to the store and ordered 81 billions of goods, which we've got to pay for as they're delivered, in addition to paying the regular household running expenses.

Misleading Labels

"The fiscal situation represented by these two extremes absolutely has to be brought into some kind of realistic focus, and the only way to do it is to have a completely new, fresh look without the old misleading labels.

"As you know, over the past years I have been involved in the European end of defense, and therefore I think I know all about paper Divisions and cardboard Wings. For the last three months, I have been heavily involved in the American end of defense, and day after day have had to struggle with the basic equation that links the military safety of this country and of the free world with the ability of the world to pay its bills and earn a living.

"This morning I told the Legislative leaders that already we can see our way clear to ask the Congress to appropriate at least $8½-billion less new money for fiscal year 1954 than had been asked for by the previous Administration. This is a preliminary figure based on three months' hard work. The great bulk of it, of course, relates to security programs. More definite figures will become available as appropriation requests are presented to the Congress during the next few weeks.

"You will note that I have been talking about the new appropriations for fiscal 1954. Actual cash savings for 1954 will be determined only as Congress acts on the appropriation requests.

No Cut In Effective Strength

"These savings will not reduce the effective military strength we will deliver to ourselves and our allies during fiscal 1954. Deliveries actually will be speeded up through the reduction of lead time, and concentration on producing those items which make the most military sense for the immediate future.

"Establishing the most effective relationship between defense requirements and economic capability in these days is probably it gives adequate recognition to the need for operating in the interest of the Department of Defense as a whole, as well as in that of a particular military service.

(d) Reexamine the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 and its practical administration in the three services, to see what further changes need to be made in the present system to assure that service in the Office of the Secretary of Defense will receive equal consideration with that in the military services.

(e) Review the statutes governing officer retirement to determine how to correct the defects in the law which at times force the retirement at the peak of their usefulness of officers largely because they were promoted for outstanding ability at a younger than normal age.

This Committee believes that the organization and procedures recommended in this report will neither operate to best advantage nor produce effectiveness and economy unless the Department continues to be staffed with competent men and women, military and civilian, especially selected and trained for their important duties.

We feel that the problem of attracting and holding career personnel needs restudy and prompt action. While the assignment of this Committee was limited to the organization and procedures of the Department of Defense, it was, on several occasions, brought to our attention that the inducements and rewards of the civilian and military career services may not have kept pace with the attractions of private enterprise. In the opinion of this Committee, this other phase of the administrative problem cannot be overemphasized.

the most complex and ramified problem to be faced by any Government. Practically everyone concerned with the problem can with some justification be a special pleader.

"But I am sure that what the overwhelming majority of Americans want to believe, is that their Government is working with diligence and intelligence to bring about as rapidly as possible a condition of true military strength. I also believe that the overwhelming majority of the people of the free world appreciate the fact that a healthy American economy and a functioning economy in their own home country are inseparable from true defense.

"Furthermore, I have a deep conviction that all these people possess a fundamental common sense which permits them to grasp the difference between a quiet, steady, long-term improvement in their defense position and the tempests stirred up by public arguments over the artificial arithmetic which is so easy to produce in the defense field.

Long-Term Program

"The program we are presenting is a long-term program, calling for a steady and adequate flow of men and materials to present a position of genuine strength to any would-be aggressor.

"The basic elements of our strategic problem have not materially changed in recent years, and certainly not in recent days. The areas and peoples vital to our nation's welfare are the same as they have been for a long time. What we are doing is to adopt a new policy for the solution of the problem.

"This change in policy is radical and cannot be effected overnight. There exists what is, in effect, a strait jacket, comprising prior authorizations, appropriations, and contracts.

"The essence of the change is this. We reject the idea that we must build up to a maximum attainable strength for some specific date theoretically fixed for a specified time in the future. Defense is not a matter of maximum strength for a single date. It is a matter of adequate protection to be projected as far into the future as the actions and apparent purposes of others may compel us.

"It is a policy that can, if necessary, be lived with over a period of years.

"Finally, I would like to remind you of what I have said many times before, and will probably have to say many times again.

Dedication and Determination

"Security based upon heavy armaments is a way of life that has been forced upon us and upon our allies. We don't like it; in fact, we hate it. But so long as such an unmistakable, self-confirmed threat to our freedom exists, we will carry these burdens with dedication and determination.

"Our hope and our prayer is that this dedication and determination will bring about a world condition when we can once again return to the arts of peace, which we have always and will always cherish above all other arts."
